Nazis Say British Air Force Falsifying Facts Of German Area Raiding

NEW YORK, March 29—Discrepancies between German and Allied claims regarding military engagements can be explained by the alleged court martial and suicide of a British aviator, accused of giving false reports of air successes, it was asserted today in a German broadcast intercepted by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The International News Service London bureau reported that the London Daily Mail on March 20 reported that Wing Commander Richard Blomfield committed suicide by gas at his Farnborough home and that he died without knowing the decision of a court martial which he faced three weeks previously. Findings at the time of Blomfield's death were not promulgated and the Daily Mail made no mention of the charges against him.

(An air ministry spokesman stated that the trial was held in Camera and that the charges were not made public. He declined further comment.)

The broadcast, directed to "American listeners," cited what it said was an article in the London Daily Mail regarding the British airman. Here, in part, is the German broadcast:

"The London Daily newspaper Daily Mail printed the sensational report today that a British flight commander, Richard Graham Bromfield, committed suicide in his cell while awaiting the verdict of his court martial. . . .

"Flight Commander Bromfield was arrested a short time ago charged with having submitted to the air ministry false reports concerning alleged successes scored in the Bay of Helgoland against German war planes.

"The report submitted to his superiors after returning from the Bay of Helgoland boasted of successes that had never taken place, of destroyed German planes that had never flown out and of bombing achievements which were the product of imagination.

"Following the trial of the court martial, Flight Commander Richard Graham Bromfield killed himself in his cell by taking poison.

"Meanwhile the Daily Mail has seized the occasion to point out recent simialar cases. One in particular has aroused considerable attention in London. A Royal Air Force officer, D. P. C. P. Wood, was dismissed from the Royal Air Force a short time ago for submitting reports of spectacular air victories which were later found to have been invented by him. . . .

"American radio listeners can rest assured that before long the discrepancy between the German high command's naval bulletins and those issued by Mr. Winston Churchill in all probability will expose the same sensational explanation as the one that has now exposed Sir Kingsley Wood's (British air secretary) spectacular victories in the air to be pure fiction."

FATHER ADMITS KILLING INFANT FOUND IN SACK

PHILADELPHIA, March 29—Cracking under the strain of persistent questioning, Michael Menichella confessed today that he killed his infant daughter with a butcher knife because the "witches made me," detectives said.

The purported confession of the 40-year-old relief worker, who for 24 hours had insisted stoutly that "witches and a big black dog" were responsible for the murder of his 16-day-old daughter, Beatrice, was disclosed by Detective Sergeant Daniel Cronin.

The child's body—her head almost severed—was found in a sack in a coal bin of her home by patrolmen shortly after the Menichellas reported the baby kidnaped.

CCC JOINS HUNT FOR COON REICHLEY

AGED HOCKING 'SANTA CLAUS' MISSING MONTH

30 Enrollees Join Sheriff Joe Farbeann In Effort To Find Clues

SON EXPRESSES WORRY

Search Of Home Fails To Reveal Evidence Of Whereabouts

LOGAN, O., March 29—Thirty CCC enrollees, aided by Sheriff Joe Farbeann, today took up the search in the deep hollows of the Hocking Parks district for some clue to the disappearance of Conrad H. (Coon) Reichley, 76. Reichley, who has a large flowing white beard, played Santa Claus in Logan every Christmas.

He has been missing since March 7.

In an interview of Ranger S. A. Reichley, Old Man's cave, a Logan newspaper was given all the facts concerning the disappearance that he could muster. He had made a trip to Roseville, Crooksville and Zanesville earlier in the week but none of the relatives or friends had seen the aged man in those cities.

Telephone calls to other surrounding towns and cities have failed to furnish a clue as to his whereabouts. He had told the ranger son that he planned to visit another son, William, of Columbus on March 24, but a call there disclosed he had not been seen.

Is Widely Known

Marked by his gray locks and flowing white beard, he was known by thousands in this district. No reports have been received from any of his acquaintances by relatives or by officers who have joined in the effort to find "Santa Claus" and he is known to them, since he started to portray that character in Logan some years ago during the holiday season.

The fact that the aged man failed to have his name listed among the Republican candidates for central committeeman from Benton Township made the son apprehensive last week. He had circulated his petition and was planning to present it to the

YOUTHFUL CRIME RING BROKEN UP AFTER KILLING

PORTSMOUTH, March 29 — State police today expressed the belief that an incipient juvenile crime wave in southwestern Ohio counties was broken up by the arrest of three Wilmington youths whose companion was accidentally killed in a quick getaway after a robbery.

Patrol Corp. John W. Brooks said the three boys, Robert Abbott, 18; Orville Hampton, 20, and William Harrison, 17, have confessed robbing William McKee, a West Union grocery truck driver, of $150 Monday night in a carefully planned holdup.

A fourth youth, John Baldwin, 17, was mortally wounded, Brooks said, when Abbott recklessly tossed a shotgun into the bandit car, the impact discharging the weapon and fatally wounding Baldwin.

The wounded youth was abandoned on the doorstep of a West Union physician but was dead when the doctor found him. His

GERMANS CLAIM SIX MERCHANT SHIPS DAMAGED

BERLIN, March 29 — Six merchant vessels were damaged, a seventh was set on fire and a patrol boat was sunk by German warplanes which bombed a British convoy near the Shetland Islands last night, the German high command announced today.

(The British admiralty contended only one German plane participated in the attack and that no damage resulted.)

Details regarding the attack were contained in the German war communique, which stated:

"There was nothing particular on the Western Front.

"The German air force which attacked a British convoy off the Shetland Islands damaged six merchant ships, set fire to one merchantman and sank one patrol boat."

A previous announcement said the German planes also attacked a French destroyer in the English Channel.

The attack was carried out last night despite adverse weather conditions, according to the announcement, which added:

"The German battle planes dispersed the convoy, hitting several ships with bombs. All the German planes returned undamaged to their bases.

"Reconnoitering continued throughout the day over the North Sea, Britain and France, yielding valuable results despite strong defensive action. Two reconnoitering planes failed to return to their home bases."

F. D., JR. PAYS $13.50 ON SPEEDING CHARGE

WILMINGTON, Del., March 29 —Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., son of the President, left $13.50 fine and costs here today after pleading guilty to charges of speeding on Glasgow Road enroute to New York.

Young Roosevelt was picked up by Private William Leach and taken before Magistrate William B. Davis, of New Castle.

"There is no excuse for it, but I was in a hurry for an appointment in New York and did not realize the speed," Davis quoted him as saying.

FATE OF TRADE TREATIES RESTS ON VIC DONAHEY

Ohio Senator May Decide Reciprocal Issue Now Before Congress

INFORMED POLLS HEARD

One Says That New Deal Has Sufficient Support To Win Approval

WASHINGTON, March 29 — Tall, grey-haired Vic Donahey of Ohio, who keeps his own counsel and is retiring from politics this summer, was "spotted" today as perhaps the key man in the impending senate votes on the Roosevelt-Hull reciprocal trade treaty program.

So evenly were opposing lines drawn that both sides admitted Senator Donahey, a Democrat, might cast the deciding ballot on the Pittman amendment requiring senate ratification of the trade pacts. Neither side professed to know the Ohio senator's decision.

A unanimous consent agreement scheduled the roll-call on the Pittman amendment at 4 p. m.

Adoption of the ratification measure would effectually negate the entire treaty program, if the house concurred. Its rejection would point to unhampered adoption of the pending resolution to extend the treaty law three years beyond its June 12 expiration date. The house already has approved extension.

MONEY OF PEN, CONVICTS TAKEN AT STATE FARM

LONDON, March 29—The Madison County prosecutor has been asked by Superintendent W. F. Amrine to investigate with a view to grand jury action charges that state funds and those of prisoners at the London prison farm have been embezzled by convicts, it was disclosed today.

Reports of shortages have been current for some time and, according to the superintendent, they were verified by state examiners. An investigation was prompted by complaints of prisoners to the state welfare department that they were not credited with all the money to which they were entitled. The shortage was said to approximate $1200.

It also was revealed that Thad D. Plummer, of Putnam County, who was released last June on parole, has been returned to the prison farm on the basis of facts uncovered during the investigation.

Plummer was returned soon after Attorney General Thomas J.

27 Taken To Homes In South

Two Families On Relief Removed By County To Legal Residences

Removal of 27 additional persons from Pickaway County to their legal residences in Kentucky and West Virginia was completed Thursday by the Pickaway County relief office working in conjunction with the sheriff's office. The move was made in an effort to relieve the county's relief load.

Twenty-two of the persons carted away are members of one family, residing in one house on a Wayne Township farm for the last several months. They include grandparents, parents, children and in-laws, five of the group being adults and the other 17 children. They were taken to Greenup, Ky., where D. H. Marcy, relief director, said they legally belong.

The other five persons were taken to Huntington, W. Va. from Wayne Township also.

Marcy said that removal of these 27 boosts the total of persons restored to their legal residences to more than 250 in the last several years.

The removals are made in trucks for which the county pays the expense. "But the expense is a minor item compared with the amount these non-resident relievers cost the county," Marcy said.

He was assisted Thursday by Deputy Sheriff Earl Weaver.

Under Secretary May Go To Georgia Retreat With The President

WASHINGTON, March 29—President Roosevelt today resumed his conferences with Secretary of State Hull and Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles on the report which the astute Welles brought back from Europe's warring nations.

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt scheduled his first cabinet meeting in three weeks, recent ones having been cancelled because of a cold which kept the chief executive in bed.

WASHINGTON, March 29—President Roosevelt today studied a comprehensive report on the odds of war or peace in Europe, compiled by his most astute diplomatic observer and based on the direct statements of the "big four" in old world politics.

But whether the President would use his newly-gained information as the basis for some dramatic move in the chaotic international game was one of the most closely-guarded secrets in the history of Washington officialdom. White House and State Department spokesmen not only refused to speculate on the President's future course themselves, but sharply warned the press against speculation.

The long-awaited report of Sumner Welles, under secretary of state, on war prospects in Europe was handed to Mr. Roosevelt last night during a conference with Welles and Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Welles' observations were based on a month-long tour of Europe, during which he talked intimately with Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany, the then Premier Edouard Daladier of France, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain and Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy. Thus his

"June Mad", Junior Class Play, Provides Highly Entertaining Evening at School

By Lyall Cryder

"June Mad", the delightful three act comedy presented Thursday by a splendid cast of members of the Junior class of Circleville High School, kept the capacity audience roaring with laughter during the entire evening. The fast moving play practically made heads spin with the effort to get the snappy lines.

Each character was absorbed in a problem. As the solutions to these were worked out, the youthful actors ran true to type in a manner which left nothing to be desired by the highly entertained audience.

All acts of the play took place in the living room of the Woods' home in Lynbrook, a small town in the Middlewest, the action of the plot being confined to three June days of one week.

Penny Wood, the daughter of the house, a slightly moonstruck, 'teenage girl, was very convincing in her thrills of happiness and doldrums of disappointments during the course of the plot. Chuck Harris, who built himself a glider, had youthful troubles involving a father with little sympathy for his hobby, and a case on Penny, who was for the moment attracted by Roger Van Vleck, a college friend of her uncle, G. Mervyn Roberts. Van Vleck, a fast worker, had a special line which he used on the 'women'.

Mrs. Wood, the mother, passed her time helping everyone, especially Effie the cook, who never could get her meals prepared for the additional guests appearing just as the family was ready to be seated. Effie's real problem, however, was the adjustment of her slip. Playing the part of the general factotum of the house, Elmer Tuttle was so thoroughly in character that he almost stole the show, much as the audience was intrigued by the love interest of the plot.

Milly Lou, the problem child who 'hung around', made life miserable for Roger Van Vleck with her attentions.

Dr. Wood was the busy physician, leaving all home problems to his wife. Mr. Harris presented a real showing as the puzzled widower left with two children to bring up. Not alone did he face the

Steamers Held By Allies In Hong Kong Port For Last Two Months

LONDON, March 29—Two Soviet steamers detained by British authorities at the Hong Kong contraband station for more than two months are being handed over to French authorities, the British ministry of economic warfare announced today.

A communique stated:

"The Soviet ships Selenga and Vladimir Mayakovsky, which were intercepted in Far Eastern waters and brought to Hong Kong on suspicion of carrying contraband destined for Germany, are being handed over to French authorities.

"The Allied navies have always acted in close cooperation regarding contraband control. The present case is one of those in which, for administrative reasons, it is convenient to transfer the ships from custody of one ally to the other.

"Neither of these ships has been released. Examinations for the purpose of contraband control have not yet been completed."

The communique served to deny reports from Hong Kong that the 2,492 ton Selenga, which was intercepted January 13 while carrying tin and antimony to the Russian port of Vladivostok, had been released with its cargo intact.

Detention of the vessels by British authorities caused Ivan Maisky, Russian ambassador to London, to lodge informal, verbal protests with British Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, who told the Russian diplomat the situation would be investigated.

The 2,261-ton Vladimir Mayakovsky was intercepted while en route to Vladivostok with copper loaded at Manzanillo, Mexico and San Pedro, Cal.

British newspapers charged yesterday that contraband goods from the United States were finding their way to Germany via Mexico and Russia. The London Daily Herald commented: "Now this is going to be stopped."

State-Wide Recognition Of Arbor Week Is Urged

COLUMBUS, March 29—In keeping with Governor Bricker's proclamation, setting aside the month of April as "conservation month" in Ohio, plans are going forward in the Division of Conservation to develop state-wide recognition for observance, on the part of various groups and organizations, in addition to the educational and tree-planting projects already arranged in the public schools.

Radio programs on many stations are planned. All service clubs, luncheon clubs, women's clubs, labor organizations, and business men as well as farmers are requested to take part. The Junior Chamber of Commerce, all golf clubs in Ohio, sportsmen's organizations, the Grange, the Farm Bureau, 4-H Clubs, Future Farmers of America, Boy and Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and kindred organizations as well as the churches of the State are being asked to arrange programs during the month in behalf of conservation of all natural resources. The newspapers of Ohio and various weekly magazines and journals are especially urged to devote editorial space to the program.

Churches May Aid

Conservation Commissioner Don Waters points out that the churches have an opportunity to play a most influential part and that conservation sermons from the pulpit will be in keeping with our responsibility to God and Nature for the resources that have been given to us in trust. "In the beginning God gave man dominion over the fowls of the air and the beasts of the field, and over all things of the Out-of-Doors, including the forests, the lands, the waters, minerals, and renewable as well as non-renewable resources. As custodians, we are responsible for the disposition we make of that trust," the conservation commissioner stated. "And in addition, it means the conservation of human values and conservation of our ideals of Americanism," he said.

The first week of April has been set aside in the schools of Ohio as Conservation Week, with special emphasis on Arbor Day and Bird Day, April 5.

It is expected that all organizations interested in conservation of natural resources, as a patriotic duty to the commonwealth and to America, will seek the aid of the Division of Conservation for observance of the month of April as Conservation Month. "Conservation is something that reaches every home and every fireside. Every organized group in Ohio can contribute a program of some kind during the month in an effort to awaken a consciousness of conservation needs, and to develop a conservation conscience in Ohio."

Practically every department of State Government, in addition to the Division of Conservation, will be called upon to take a part in observance of Conservation Month.

CORN CROP MAY BECOME VITAL FOR SWEETENING

That we might look to "the enormous corn crops for the future supply of sweets for the nation" was the prediction of E. J. Seukle, commercial chemist when he described "sweetose" a new sweetening agent made from corn, to the National Farm Chemurgic Conference in Chicago.

"Sweetose will make a market for many millions of bushels of corn per year," Seukle said. "Corn is our greatest farm crop and in fact our most serious surplus crop."

Although a patent has been applied for and the process is still secret, he said the syrup was made by a novel modification of the ordinary corn syrup manufacture. Data is now available on theuses of sweetose in juices, tomatoes, jellies, jams, preserves, wines, frozen fruits and other products. Tests are being completed on the use of the new product in sweetened condensed milk, ice cream, ices, chocolate milk and other frozen desserts.

"In all tests the product has shown is versatility and ability not only to reduce costs but produce products having certain advantages over those formerly in use," Suekle said.

Sweetose, he said, had double the sweetness of corn syrup, was not as sticky and was non-crystalizing.

"Since through the conversion of corn starches to sugars we can produce sweetening agents equally as nutritious and nearly as sweet as those obtained by the importation of foreign grown sucrose, what is more logical than to look to the enormous corn crop for the future supply of sweets for the nation," he said.

Following the path of the Sears-Nichols plant of Circleville, the Chillicothe unit of the concern is going on the block April 11 when the equipment and real estate will be sold.

The plants in Circleville and Chillicothe have been operating for three generations. Operations had ceased at the Circleville plant several years ago and the factory is being torn down.

The cannery at Chillicothe had been operating under lease by the Ladoga Canning Company of Indianapolis. Recently it has been idle.

The government auctioneer plans to sell 273 lots of machinery for canning peas, corn, green beans, beets, pumpkin and spinach. The real estate will be offered privately by Thomas J. CHURCH COUNCIL PLANS DRAMATIC SERVICE SUNDAY

Three Teams Invade City To Present Plays In Parish House Of St. Philip's

TWO JUDGES ANNOUNCED

Six Purposes Of Ohio-Wide Competition Disclosed By Officials

A dramatic program that promises to be highly interesting will be presented in the parish house of St. Philip's Episcopal Church Sunday at 2:30 p. m. with the public invited.

The program is a part of the fifth annual Religious Drama Festival of Ohio Youth sponsored by the Ohio Council of Religious Educatin. A. T. Arnold, executive secretary of the Ohio Council, said that St. Philip's Church had been chosen because of the stage in its parish house that will permit dramatic teams from three cities to present their productions.

Appearing on the program will be dramatic teams from Somerset, representing Perry County; Portsmouth, representing Scioto County, and Columbus, representing Franklin County. The titles of dramas to be presented will be: "No Banners Flying", "A Sign Unto You", and "Father Forgive", respectively.

The dramatic team determined to be the winner will go to Columbus for final competition April 13 and 14.

Judges of the Sunday competition will be Kingsley Povenmire of Cincinnati, state chairman of the festival, and Roy H. Bowen of Columbus. Both are former Circleville High School instructors.

The program will be of great interest to high school pupils who are studying speaking, debate and drama since criticisms will be offered at the end of each presentation, the judges and others to participate.

The purposes of the religious drama programs are:

1. To promote a larger use of the Religious Drama as a spiritual and educational experience in the Church.

2. To raise the standard of Religious Drama.

3. To afford to groups of young people a dynamic means by which they may serve their church and their community.

4. To afford to groups of young people a method by which they may become interpreters of the Christian message.

5. To develop a more sympathetic understanding among the young people of different denominations in community, county and state and to lead these young people to think and work together cooperatively.

6. To encourage creative writing of Religious Drama.

The Continuing Task

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Newman Campbell

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for March 31 is Matthew 28:16-20, the Golden Text being Acts 1:8, "Ye shall be my witness . . . unto the uttermost part of the earth.")

IT IS conceded that there were ten times in all in which our Lord appeared to his disciples after His resurrection, from the first one, early Easter morning at the tomb where He appeared to the Marys, until the time He was taken up to heaven, forty days later.

John tells us that the same evening of the day He had been seen by Mary Magdalene. He appeared to His eleven apostles, as they were gathered together with closed doors for fear of the Jews. In an instant Jesus stood in their midst, saying, "Peace be unto you." And He showed them His hands and side. "Then were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord," says John.

One of them, however, Thomas, was not present at this time and he refused to believe when told, "We have seen the Lord," "Except I shall see in His hands the prints of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand unto His side. I will not believe," he stated. After eight days the disciples were again gathered together and Thomas was with them, and Jesus stood again in their midst and told Thomas to reach thither his finger and "behold my hands, and reach thither thy hand, and thrust it into My side; and be not faitless, but believing."

Thomas' answer was, "My Lord and my God!" Jesus said: "Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed."

In John we also find the story of the apostles' flashing trip, when Jesus appeared on the beach. Simon Peter had said he was going fishing, and four others said they would go with him. Then went in a ship and fished all night but caught nothing. When the morning came, Jesus stood on the beach, but the disciples knew Him not. He calle dto them, "Children, have ye any meat?" and they answered no.

Then He told them where to cast their net, and when they did as He said, it was so heavy they could not draw it to land. One said to Peter, "It is the Lord." When Peter heard that he cast himself into the sea to swim to shore and the others dragged the net in. When they came to land they found a fire going on the sand and bread and fish spread out, and Jesus called them to "come and dine."

The last recorded time Jesus came to His disciples as they were gathered in a room with closed doors. He said to them: "All authority hath been given unto Me in heaven and on earth.

"Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit;

"Teaching them to observe all things whatsover I commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

St. Mark says: "So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, He was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God."

And of the disciples he says: "And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with him, and confirming the word with signs following."

That is the work millions of followers of these disciples have been engaged in all these years since that time. Missionaries have gone to far countries trying to save those who never before had heard of Christianity. David Livingstone was one of these. His work in Africa is well known, and has been called to the attention of the people of this generation recently by a motion picture which showed him in that once so-called "dark continent." His labors ended when he died of fever contracted in the jungles and swamps of that continent. Such men have found, truly, that Christ has been with them in their labors and has helped them.

CENSUS BUREAU SETS APRIL 8 FOR TRANSIENTS

WASHINGTON, March 29—The census bureau today set aside April 8 as the day on which the nation's transient population will be counted.

Enumerators will call at hotels, tourist camps, one-night lodging houses, and even "flop joints," to insure accuracy of the 1940 census.

No attempt will be made to enumerate persons riding on trains, ships, buses or other modes of transportation on this day. The census bureau said that the number of travelers is small in relation to the entire population and the majority of these will be counted when the enumetrator calls at their homes.

POLITICOS HINT DRAMATIC MOVE TO BRING PEACE

Spokesman For Executive Silent After Conference Of Three Officials

information came—in sports idiom—out of "the horse's mouth."

Talks To Continue

It was thought likely that the Roosevelt - Welles conversation would be continued today or tomorrow, although Welles said that no definite appointment at the White House had yet been scheduled.

Before Sunday the President is expected to leave for Warm Springs, Ga., to recuperate from a tenacious cold. Welles may be asked to accompany him there.

There was one indication that Mr. Roosevelt might break his silence today on the Welles report. His regular Friday press conference, normally held in mid-morning, was set back to 4 p. m. If the President planned any public comment on European conditions, observers pointed out, he probably would want time to digest the report and possibly discuss it with members of his cabinet before making any statement.

The curiosity inspired by Pandora's Box was mild compared to that aroused by the small, tan dispatch case which Welles brought back from Europe. This curiosity is not confined to the press, for foreign embassies here have been seeking dicreetly, through every possible channel of information, for some inkling of what Welles reported.

An attempt to curb speculation was made by the White House last night in a highly unusual manner. Stephen T. Early, one of Mr. Roosevelt's secretaries, advised correspondents not to go out on "any limbs" in their dispatches today.

None Have Reports

"Neither the secretary of state nor the under secretary will have any word to say following their conference to the press or to their friends or to any one anywhere," Early said.

Some officials, recalling Mr. Roosevelt's appeals on three separate occasions to European leaders in an effort to prevent the present war, believe that he would be glad to offer a peace plan if he thought it had a reasonable chance of acceptance. Such a diplomatic coup, if successful, would underscore the President's name in world history and enhance Democratic chances of success in this year's elections.

But those who scoff at a "peace plan" point out that Great Britain and France repeatedly have declared they would not accept any settlement that left Germany under Hitler or in a military position for further conquests. At the same time, Germany has made it clear that it will give up nothing it has gained in Europe, and will ask for economic concessions and colonies as the price for peace.

BALDWIN ESTATE SUED FOR $2,712 SERVICES

A suit was filed in Common Pleas Court Friday by Hattie M. Butler, West Franklin Street, against Fred C. Clark, South Court Street, as executor of the estate of Elizabeth R. Baldwin.

Miss Butler asks for $2,712 in her petition which she states was owed to her by Mrs. Baldwin for her services as a housekeeper and nurse from 1933 to her death in June, 1939. The petition states further that she presented a statement to Mr. Clark as executor of the estate in January, 1940 and that the statement was returned at the end of that month without a remittance.

The $2,712 bill represents the debt plus six percent interest from June, 1939.

FATE OF TRADE TREATIES RESTS ON VIC DONAHEY

seven senators out of the running because of absence or pairs, one poll gave the administration a 46-43 victory over the ratification backers; the other placed the count at 44-44, with Donahey in the middle and still uncommitted.

This situation, anticipating 89 votes, precluded the possibility of a tie which would permit Vice President Garner to cast his vote, but even this was not "nailed down." Sen. Andrews (D) Fla., not only was absent, but couldn't be located by telephone. Some members said he might be enroute to Washington to cast his ballot.

Administration forces predicted they would win. Ratification advocates reluctantly admitted it "looked bad" for them, but senate Republican Leader McNary warned. "We still have a fighting chance to win on the ratification amendment.

Sen. Glass To Vote

The ratification faction was cheered by several announcements of support, one coming from Virginia's peppery octogenarian, Sen. Carter Glass.

"Of course I shall vote for ratification," said Glass. "Of course these agreements are treaties, and of course the constitution requires that they be ratified by the senate."

CLASS PLAY

problem of keeping his son from breaking his neck, but the task of keeping in line his beautiful daughter Julie, who had ideas of her own in regard to love and fair play.

The excellent work of the entire cast showed the careful direction of Samuel Johnson, high school dramatics coach, and the expending of many hours of exhausting drill. The play moved so smoothly that it ceased to seem like a play, but rather the real developments of family life.

Anyone will get plenty of entertainment out of this production, which is to be repeated tonight in the high school auditorium. Not only will you see a play, but you will review many of your own youthful trials and tragedies as the plot unfolds.

The cast of the Thursday production includes Penny Wood, Norma Jean Brown; Chuck Harris, James Callihan; Mrs. Wood, Marjorie Friece; Elmer Tuttle, William Thornton; Dr. Wood, Charles Mumaw; Effie, Peggy Goeller; Milly Lou, Mary Schreiner; G. Mervyn Robert, Leland Siegwald; Roger Van Vleck, Paul Turner; Mr. Harris, George Skaggs; Shirley Wentworth, Helen Beck; Ralph Wentworth, Lloyd Jonnes; Julie Harris, Doris Waters.

The business staff of the production includes Robert Brown and Sam Stubbs as co-managers, Mark Coffland, Jane Colville, Joan Downing, Elmina Morrison, Pollyanna Friedman and Norma Wolfe.

Clark Martin and Robert Melvin were co-managers of the stage with their crew including John Goodchild, Roy Norris and Don Wells.

The properties were in charge of Betty Clifton and Betty Sapp, co-managers, Jack Imler, Mary Ruth Owens and Stella Skinner. Margaret Adkins and Letty Strawser were prompters; Elmer Barr, Jane Colville, Carl Eby, Pollyanna Friedman, Eileen Kirby, Mary Ruth Owens, Betty Sapp, Loraine Stambaugh, Nolan Simms, Grace Wagner and Norma Jean Wolfe, ushers.

The many articles of the attractive setting were loaned by friends of the class members.

Last in mention, but not least in the enjoyment of the evening at the play, was the music presented by the high school orchestra under the direction of C. F. Zaenglein.

companions fled to Manchester where they abandoned the car and then proceeded to Maysville, Ky. They were arrested in Wilmington later by officers investigating the death of Baldwin.

About $100 of McKee's money was found in the trio's passession, Patrolman Brooks asserted. He said that a first degree murder trial now in progress in West Union might delay their removal to the Adams county seat to face robbery charges. Since authorities are convinced that the shooting of Baldwin was accidental, no charges were expected to be filed in that connection.

The trooper said the arrested youths confessed that as long as two weeks ago they planned to rob McKee. He said that Harrison pretended to be trying to repair their car while Abbott and Hampton hid nearby, Baldwin remaining out of sight in the rear seat.

When McKee stopped to render assistance he was held up and robbed, then bound and left in his grocery truck. The young bandits' carefully laid plans went away when in their haste to escape they accidentally shot one of their own number, said Brooks.

The trooper added that burglary charges might be filed against the trio and another youth for the robbery of a store in Melvin, O., of merchandise and a small sum of cash.

YOUTH SENT TO JAIL; CHIEF HITS LOITERING

Paul Will, 20, East High Street, was remanded to the County Jail Friday when he defaulted payment of a fine of $25 and costs levied by Mayor William Cady on charges of drunk and disorderly conduct.

Arrested Thursday night at Court and Main Streets, he was reported to have acted in an ungentlemanly manner toward a woman passerby.

Police Chief William McCrady said Friday that police will be given orders to disperse youths who congregate nightly about the corners of Court and Main Streets. Arrests will be made of those who refuse to leave or who continue to loiter, he said. Police have received further orders to arrest anyone annoying women passersby.

DEWEY CARRIES CAMPAIGN INTO KELLY'S CAMP

CHICAGO, March 29—Moving into Wisconsin, where he faces a vote test Tuesday, District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey of New York today continued a gloves-off denunciation of the New Deal unequalled for vigor in recent political history.

In the second of three set speeches for his Midwest tour, Dewey last night charged widespread corruption in the WPA and laid special emphasis on corruption which he claimed permeates Illinois politics. Tremendous applause shook the Chicago stadium when Dewey declared:

"At present your New Deal Kelly-Nash machine is running a close race with our own (New York) mangy tiger in Tammany Hall to see which is the lowest form of animal life."

His reference was to the political organization dominated by Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago and National Democatic Committeeman Patrick A. Nash, targets of both Republicans and "rebel" Democratic forces in the current state primary election campaign.

board. He never appeared to do so.

Last Seen March 4

He visited at Ranger Reichley home over the end of the week on March 3 and 4. On the latter date, he returned to South Bloomingville where he called for his mail at the postoffice. He "got an armload of mail" according to the son. Later he purchased a loaf of bread at the store there and then started home. That was the last time he was seen.

A search of the home failed to disclose any of the mail or any evidence that the bread had been taken there. Ranger Reichley and neighbors combed the neighborhood and searched every secluded spot. They examined streams and old wells and they visited all of the gorges in that vicinity, but to no avail.

Broadcast Is Made

A broadcast was made over station WBNS Monday and newspapers of the state have been carrying news of the disappearance, but no response has been received.

The son did not know whether he carried any considerable amount of money. He was wearing his good clothes, but no other clothing is missing from the home, he said.

That Mr. Reichler might have gone to visit relatives outside the state is a possibility, but the son said he never took trips of that kind without disclosing his intentions. The search is being continued.

MONEY OF PEN, CONVICTS TAKEN AT STATE FARM

Herbert informed the state parole commission that it may revoke a parole if previously concealed information about a convict is unearthed after his release.

Plummer, it was stated, had access to institutional financial records. He was reported to have entered the restaurant business in Lima upon his release last summer.

Money often is deposited with the prison farm office by relatives of inmates to be used for purchasing items which they are allowed. It was these funds, according to Amrine, which was tampered with by convict-clerks, and in a few instances the state was illegally charged for items.

Further parole revocations were hinted.

LONDON GREETS NEWS THAT NAZI FLEET IS MOVING

LONDON, March 29 — London naval circles today buzzed with excitement after hearing reports that Nazi warships were en route to the Norwegian coast to give battle to British craft pressing the blockade against German ore ships.

While these reports were unofficial and based on nothing more than a broadcast by the Rome radio station, quoting alleged Berlin sources, they were greeted with enthusiasm.

It was reported that a German battle squadron sailed from the Nazi naval base at Wilhelmshaven yesterday and was proceeding along the Danish North Sea coast to the "protected route" through Norwegian territorial waters, used by Nazi ore ships while the Gulf of Bothnia and Baltic are frozen.

The way to a man's heart...

(Yes, through his stomach, as the old saw says)

A man truly belongs to the animal kingdom when he sits down to a well-set table!

There's that aroma rising from an oozing roast. And the smoke-steam from hot biscuits and melting butter. And the bright colors of fresh vegetables and the tart salad. And—sure—a challenging mountain of fluffy, white mashed potatoes with brown, rich gravy to crawl over it!

Back of this invitation to hearty eating is the story of two sharp eyes. They belong to the housewife who planned and prepared the meal. She practiced considerable wizardry in the kitchen, of course. But long before the food even reached her house she had assured the success of her meal.

She read the food advertisements in this newspaper. She selected each item of her meal with studied care. And she set a table fit for a king . . . on an every-day allowance! By reading the advertisements she served well . . . and saved money!

STATE COLLEGE TOWN SHOCKED BY GIRL'S DEATH

Freshman Found Murdered Believed Grabbed Near Her Dormitory

WITNESSES DISCOVERED

Students In Pennsylvania Stunned; Fraternity Leaders Called

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., March 29—Rachel H. Taylor, the 16-year-old Penn State College freshman, may have been within a few feet of safety in her dormitory when her cruel murderer overtook her early Thursday, police disclosed today.

Two men idling in a garage a bare half block from the Frances Atherton dormitory reported they saw a girl resembling Rachel pass early Thursday at about the time the girl debarked from a bus at the college.

The girl was stockily built as was Rachel. She was lugging two coats and a suit-case as also was Rachel. She stopped momentarily in front of the garage and switched the coats and bag from arm to arm, they said.

One of the men, Norman Crandall, a former State College restaurant employe, said he saw an automobile move down the street just after the girl had passed. He said he didn't notice whether it stopped or not.

Both men were to be shown photographs of the girl today to see if they can identify her.

Attacker Known

Rachel was returning home from an Easter vacation at her home in Wildwood, N. J. But before she reached her dormitory, she was intercepted by a killer in an automobile, a maniac who clubbed and stabbed her to death. Because of her reserved attitude toward men, it was believed she was acquainted with the person who proffered her a ride.

The 5,000 Penn State College students were thrown into high excitement by a warning from the college burgess, Wilbur F. Leitzell, that the killer may be among them.

Burgess Leitzell summoned the presidents of the 50 college fraternities into conference and appealed for their cooperation in running down the maniacal killer. He asked them to relay any information or clues they have. The fraternity presidents were asked to check on the whereabouts of all their members late Wednesday night when Rachel was killed and report any found missing.

It had been believed that after riding most of the day on the bus Rachel accepted a ride from the bus station to the dormitory when she reached State College at 1:30 a. m. Thursday. Her horribly battered body was found in front of the Lemont Consolidated School, about four miles from the college.

Seen By Co-eds

Two co-eds reported to police they had seen Rachel walking the three blocks towards the dormitory a short distance from the bus station. The story of the two men in the garage put her almost within the shadows of the building.

In one brief interval, after passing the garage and before reaching the dormitory, she was apparently overtaken by her assailant.

An analysis of the contents of her stomach revealed she had eaten chocolate-covered doughnuts before she was murdered. Police were trying to track down the restaurant or inn where she could have gotten such a snack at that late hour.

It was learned that Miss Taylor was the only woman passenger on the bus from Lewistown, Pa., to State College. Other student passengers said she rode alone from Harrisburg to the college by way of Lewistown.

From Bryn Mawr, Pa., to Harrisburg, she sat beside Samuel Virgilio, a State College horticultural student. Virgilio said the girl appeared restless and unable to sleep most of the journey. She talked but little, he asserted.

The girl's father, Percy Taylor, a well-to-do fish dealer, and her brother, viewed the body at the morgue last night. The father broke down on gazing at the girl's mutilated features.

Plaster casts were made of tire marks and a man's foot-print found near the body. A blood-stained handbag, a blood-stained man's handkerchief, the girl's shoes, text-books and a pocket-book, found strewn along the highway at various points as if thrown from an automobile, were carefully examined for finger-prints.

A coroner's jury rendered a verdict of murder "by crushing of the skull with some blunt or sharp instrument by person or persons unknown."

Rachel had not been criminally assaulted, Dr. Herbert Glenn announced after an examination. The body had numerous skin punctures, cuts and bruises and the clothing was partly torn away.

CROSBY'S JOURNEY

Bing Crosby has decided where to spend his summer vacation from the Music Hall. He will go on a horse-trading and shopping expedition to Argentina, the South American country which exports some of the proudest names of the turf. His family will go along. If Bing finds a few horses for his stables, Bob Burns wishes him better luck than on previous horse trades. A few years ago, Bing looked over a newly-arrived shipment from Argentina, picked Ligaroti as the likeliest champion of the lot. He brushed off Kayak II as not quite having the stuff. Among turfmen, he hasn't lived down that error.

Fred MacMurray, who appeared this week opposite Barbara Stanwyck in "Remember the Night," accepted by telephone from a hunting camp across the border in Mexico.

OPEN LETTERS

TO CITY AUTHORITIES

ADMINISTRATION: There are many persons who stand behind you 100 percent in any campaign that you might undertake to break up sale of beer or any other intoxicants to children. This is a law violation that should not receive any mercy from any court officer. It is not difficult to figure a youngster's age even if he might be large for that age. There just isn't any excuse for sale of intoxicants to minors, and any persons violating the law should be punished. A second offense should bring a much larger fine, and possibly a few days in the 'cooler'.

CIRCUITEER.

TO OHIO STATE ALUMNI

GRADS: I am highly pleased that you have finally completed an organization that will function. Congratulations are in order for persons who were responsible for getting the alumni together for this meeting and to persons who accepted offices in the alumni group. A college alumni can do much to advance the interests of its school, just as a high school alumni does. Circleville is without a high school organization, but the need for one is oftentimes apparent. Many cities couldn't get along without the ones that have been operating in their communities for many years. I hope that the Ohio State University Alumni meets regularly and that it works in the interest of the university at all times. Do not make your organization just a dinner club, that meets once a year; get into action with the welfare of Ohio State U. in mind.

CIRCUITEER.

TO MOTORISTS

DRIVERS: I know that none of you would like to donate $25 to the city of Circleville for driving an automobile without proper license plates. I know that few of you could afford to put 25 smackers on the line. So, if you do not have new 1940 license tags prior to Monday, please leave your automobile in its garage. The state has declared definitely that there will be no extension of time for use of 1939 tags and mayors of all municipalities have been instructed to assess $25 fines against all drivers who try to "run the gauntlet" by using 1939 plates on Monday. Motorists are being given every opportunity to buy new plates. The county clerk's office will be open Saturday afternoon to accommodate persons who need certificates of title certified; the deputy registrar's office will be open each evening to handle the late rush. Be sure to get your tags before Sunday.

CIRCUITEER.

TO CAR OPERATORS

FOLK: More and more of you are watching your car operation as carefully as possible to avoid being cited into court for violations. If this apparent cooperation continues Circleville one of these days will own a reputation for being a traffic law-abiding city. New regulations have gone into effect and others are soon to become effective. The new ones already being operated include regulation of speed in business and residential districts and parking of cars against traffic, in other words, on the wrong side of the street. Several persons have been ordered before the mayor for violating the latter ordinance which started operation just last week. In a short time the ordinance that orders parallel parking on Main Street begins operation. This one, too, will have to be observed, and I feel certain that Circleville motorists will do everything in their power to abide by the rulings set up by council, since all are drawn in an effort to make highway traffic safer for all concerned.

CIRCUITEER.

TO ALL

FRIENDS: A program will be offered in the auditorium of St. Philip's Episcopal Church parish house Sunday afternoon which should attract a record crowd. It is a dramatic program sponsored by the Youth Division of the Ohio Council of Religious Education as a part of a statewide undertaking. Dramatic teams from Somerset, Portsmouth and Columbus will come to Circleville to participate. Trained critics will be present and discussions will be conducted after each drama has been presented. The afternoon should provide some excellent entertainment. There will be no admission charged to the event. Winner of the contest will go to Columbus later to take part in the state finals. Two former Circleville High School dramatic instructors will judge the dramatic presentations Sunday and the event will provide many of their former pupils a chance to renew acquaintances.

CIRCUITEER.

TO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

BUSINESSMEN: Announcement that your welcoming committee is functioning is being received in Circleville with much appreciation. It is an excellent undertaking to have your committee call on newcomers to Circleville with a basket filled with contributions from Circleville merchants who wish the newcomers to become acquainted with their products. Not only does such a committee help to acquaint the new residents with goods available in Circleville, but it also shows them that their presence has been noted by persons other than their immediate neighbors. This committee may overcome one of Circleville's very apparent shortcomings. Many persons, who are more or less new residents, have been heard to remark that Circleville is a difficult city in which to become acquainted; that residents do not receive newcomers in a very cordial manner. I hope that the committee continues to function and that the city's utilities will cooperate by letting the Chamber of Commerce know when a new family arrives. Cooperation means much to the success of this program.

CIRCUITEER.

WORLD AT A GLANCE ..... —By— Charles P. Stewart

THE RIVERS AND HARBORS CONGRESS, held in Washington recently, wanted considerably more money, for the development of America's inland waterways, than President Roosevelt regards as a judicious federal expenditure at present. It's the usual situation. Theoretically everybody's strongly proeconomy. But no special group is in favor of it in connection with the particular objective that that group is interested in.

From remarks I overheard at the last R. and H. congress I wouldn't draw the conclusion that those in attendance were violently clamorous for coastal harbor improvements, but there was no doubt that all hands wanted plenty of cash to make our rivers more and more conveniently navigable.

There also was vehement objection to making inland water transportation subject to regulation by the Interstate Commerce Commission or any other government bureau.

The foremost proponent of I. C. C. regulation is Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, who has just completed an investigation of the railroads' financial straits during the last decade or two. There's no doubt that the rail lines are hard up. The Wheeler inquiry explained their distress on the ground that auto trucks and river steamboatmen have had their highways and waterways improved for them at public expense, enabling them to underbid the rail companies, which have to pay for their own permanent equipment.

RIVAL VIEWS

The Wheeler theory is that the I. C. C. should be empowered to require the truckmen and rivermen to hike their rates, to permit the railroads the better to compete with them.

This may be all right from the standpoint of Senator Wheeler, who hails from an area which is very dependent on railroads, but isn't much tapped by waterways. It isn't much satisfactory reasoning to Senator Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota, who's up at the head of mid-continental water. Senator Shipstead recalls times when the railroads, uncompeted with, were middling oppressive to his section of the country. It's largely their own fault, he says, that they're pinched today; they wouldn't have been if they hadn't been so greedy when they had a monopoly.

The Minnesota senator calls attention to the huge saving his state makes by getting its coal by river, down the Ohio river and up the Mississippi; to its economy in its own products' shipment down the Father of Waters, up the Ohio and the Big Muddy, and thereabouts. He's for navigation and lots of it, as cheaply as possible.

"What's more," observes Senator Shipstead, "water's an asset. We don't want to trickle it off as soon as possible, by nature's own means.

ARGUMENT FOR WATER

"We want to conserve it, upriver, by means of dams, turning it loose only as it's needed, to float river boats. It prevents erosion. It preserves our soil. It's anything but a liability."

This isn't much of a defense of the auto-truck, of which the railroads also complain.

Trucks, after all, can't do a large bulk business.

They can carry quite a few second-class passengers. I say second-class advisedly. I've travelled both by bus and by train, and I'll guarantee that a train is the more comfortable than the two. I don't think that aviation makes much of a dent.

Anyway, busses can't carry coal and grain in appreciable quantities. River boats can.

Essentially the row is between the railroads' past misdeeds and current conditions.

Senator Shipstead is right, though, in saying that inland water is an asset.

It's involved in the rivers and harbors controversy—rivers particularly; not so much harbors.

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IS BACTERIAL warfare the secret weapon which Hitler plans against his enemies?

We have heard of the idea of spreading disease germs among the enemy population, but the difficulty for a bacteriologist has been to conceive of a plan which would be likely to work.

I have information from a source which must remain anonymous, but which is sufficiently responsible that he has committed himself to writing, that what the Germans have in mind is the transmission of tularemia (better known as rabbit fever).

They are said to have infected colonies of flies, which are being kept in a refrigerator at a temperature of about 40 to 50 degrees above zero. It has been found that when these flies are returned to an ordinary warm temperature, they are restored to activity and the tularemia germs begin to develop inside their bodies.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Dropped from Planes

The flies can be taken from the refrigerator in wholesale quantities and dropped from airplanes to enemy countries. They infect animals, and the animals, in turn, infect humans just as they have done in this country. This bacteriological war, of course, would be specifically planned for the civilian population and not for the soldiers at the front.

According to bacteriologists and hygienists to whom I have talked, the plan is perfectly feasible. In the first place, tularemia, though it usually occurs in a mild form, may become malignant. We had a number of cases of malignant tularemia resulting in death last fall in the United States. We also have had reports that tularemia affects not only such animals as rabbits (the usual reservoir), but also domestic animals, fowls and even fish.

The German technicians may have developed a special malignant form of tularemia, and one that will have an affinity for domestic rather than wild animals. This form naturally would reach the human population sooner.

Difficulties Encountered

When one considers any other form of bacterial warfare, he is met with technical difficulties. It would no longer be possible to infect the water supply with the old scourges of typhoid fever or cholera because public health methods are adequate in all civilized countries to protect the population from this source of infection. Bubonic plague is too uncertain because the animals infected might not reach the civilian population. Nobody knows the germ of influenza, so that can't be spread around. The only thing that is left is some form of insect-carried infection.

Tularemia can be prevented by wearing rubber gloves when dressing animals, but such precautions are, as we know from our own experience, too often neglected.

The only catch in this scheme for bacterial warfare is that the tularemia might easily get across the border into Germany, and, with the immunity of the German people weakened by an insufficient diet, as described by Dr. Gumpert in Heil Hunger: Health Under Hitler (published by the Alliance Book Corporation), the effects might be more decimating on the German population than on a foreign one.

THE KILLER SPEAKS

by RICHARD HOUGHTON

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

I, Bill Strickland, am suspected in the murder of Alfred Markham, rich young jeweler, at a party at the Rio Vista club. An hour later, in the dark garden where my friend was stabbed, I am slugged, trussed up and kidnaped. Belzer, reporter for The Morning Eagle, and Louise Markham, sister of Alfred, rescue me. My unknown kidnaper sends me a warning not to identify him to the police. The next night, with a police guard in front of my rooms, I return home, feeling safe, and open the door to come face to face with a man.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

"BELZER!" I gasped.

He blinked his eyes in the sudden light and grinned at me. "Sorry I scared you. Guess I must have fallen asleep."

"But how did you get in here?"

He looked surprised. "I asked the landlady if I could wait. She looked kinda peeved to be waked at midnight, but my press card made her think I was important. I waited a half hour, then I turned off the light to get a snooze."

"But the guard out in front—the policeman?"

"Oh, yeah! I wasn't sure of the address. He said this was it. He's a friend of mine."

I was beginning to breathe normally again. "What did you want to see me about?" I offered him a cigaret and lighted one myself, then dropped to a seat on the edge of the sofa.

"About a little more co-operation. Some of the smart guys on the other papers will be around to see you in the morning. I'm here first."

"So I see. It's evident. Why?"

"Just to be here first, that's all. Belzer of the Eagle gets his man—first."

"You mean you intend to stay here the rest of the night?"

"And why not? I've slept on worse places than that sofa. Right after sun-up you and I can start going places."

I couldn't help grinning back at him. The cheek of him! However, that was the way he got his news. He was a good reporter. No one could deny it.

The sofa made up into a fairly comfortable bed. I loaned him a pair of spare blankets. "Don't open the window too wide," I warned him. "Fog is likely to blow in from the river."

"Don't I know it! I'll sleep with the windows shut. Wouldn't want to dampen any of these faces you have hanging around the walls. Did you paint 'em all? Who's that dame over the radio?" He twisted his cigaret butt into the ash tray and squinted at her again. "I've seen her some place."

"You saw her at the Rio Vista club," I told him. "That's Miss Muriel Benson."

"Oh, yeah! The dame that fainted." He gave me a queer look. "Well, g'night, Butch. See you in the morning."

The last I saw of him as I closed the bedroom door, he was staring at the picture and scratching his head. Now that he had taken his hat off, at last, I noticed that he was slightly bald.

I expected to lie awake, my thoughts in a turmoil, but I reckoned without the physical exhaustion of the past 24 hours. My sleep was dreamless. I wakened to find Belzer in the doorway, banging on a tin plate with a spoon. The air was pungent with the aroma of coffee.

I jumped out of bed. "Stop that! My landlady—"

"Your landlady is downtown, doing her shopping. It's nine o'clock and we've got to be on our way. My policeman friend at your front door goes off duty at 10, and his successor may not be as successful in persuading my rivals that you're not to be disturbed."

He led me, still in my pajamas, to the front window where we peeked through the curtains. Several young men stood on the sidewalk below, arguing with the plain clothes officer. Two cameramen were seated on the curb as though resigned to waiting all day.

"What will we do—go out the back way?" I asked him.

"Leave that to me. Get dressed. I'll get you out of here."

I had to admit he was a good cook. By 9:30, bathed, shaved and in clean clothes, with a breakfast of bacon and eggs to fortify me against what the day might bring, I was ready to follow the lead of my unusual guest.

"You realize," I reminded him, "that I am doing this as a special favor to you. After all, I might just walk out there and talk to those reporters."

He wasn't the least perturbed. "Not you, Butch. You're too honest. You can't forget that I saved your life."

"And so it's to be another exclusive story, is it?"

"Right. Today you and I find the warehouse where you were held prisoner. We'll also go looking for the man who kidnaped you. I have a line on him, believe it or not."

"That's what the police thought last night." I was skeptical, but at the same time curious. "When do we start?"

"Now." He dumped a pot of water over the dirty dishes in the sink, so they would soak. Stepping to the telephone he asked for a number with which he seemed to be familiar, but which was strange to me.

"All set," he said into the mouthpiece.

Enjoying my mystification, he signaled me to the window again. "Watch!" he whispered.

In less than five minutes, down the street came an old covered wagon, drawn by two burros and driven by an old man with a long white beard.

One of the cameramen stood up and reached for his camera. The other hesitated.

A pretty girl stuck her head out of the curtains of the covered wagon behind the old man.

The first cameraman stepped out into the street to get a picture, but the second one had literally leaped past him to get it first.

The old man saw them coming. He turned the burros around. I'd never seen burros move so quickly before. He cracked a whip, and they broke into a fast shuffle. They didn't want to run, but they were doing their second best.

The reporters joined the chase. They were catching up with the queer vehicle at the corner, but the old man kept plying the whip, and in another moment the burros had all but rounded the bend, out of sight.

"Okay," said Belzer. He was headed for the stairs. I was close behind. In two minutes we were out on the street, and in another minute were safely around the opposite corner of the block.

The Morning Eagle's ace couldn't help stopping to catch his breath and expend it in a laugh. "I knew that old guy would come in handy, the moment I saw him yesterday. No cameraman could resist such a perfect shot."

"You mean, you arranged for him to supply this diversion?"

"Sure. He's been waiting at the parking lot a block down the street since eight o'clock. I picked that place because it has a telephone."

"But if it's such a perfect picture, didn't you cheat your paper out of—"

He chuckled. "We got our picture yesterday. And I paid him plenty to keep quiet about the fact that he is the man who put me wise to the best clue yet in the Markham murder case. Won't those guys feel sick when they read The Morning Eagle tomorrow!"

STARS SAY—

For Friday, March 29

THE PLANETARY configurations for the day are read as extremely benefic, with strong prospects of fulfilled ambitions and aspirations in every direction. It is a time for reaching for high goals, and toward social, sentimental and humanitarian objectives. In business there is promise of the co-operation of those in power and financial security, whose friendship will be assured and greatly worthwhile. Romance also figures for the eligible. But in all there is an aura of intrigue, collusion or subtlety, operating for good or ill, according to the way it is manipulated.

Those whose birthday it is are at the threshold of a door in which benefic astral forces will be found the open sesame for attaining high goals and fondly-cherished hopes and wishes. In business the friendship and co-operation of the mighty should be cultivated. In social, emotional and philanthropic avenues the signs are propitious, especially for courtship and marriage. But all affairs are under tow forms of intrigue, subtlety and conspiracy—one adverse, the other to be employed to enhance and facilitate cautious plans. Be alert to deception and peculiar entanglements.

A child born on this day may have much ability for success, with expansive and large ambitions, which it may put over on a pretentious scale through the support of those in power. Popularity social prestige and romance are assured.

The "Hole" Story of Transplanting a Tree

The life of a tree depends largely upon the care exercised in transplanting it. From the time a tree is dug until it is finally planted the roots should not be exposed to sun, wind or drying air, but they should be kept moist and protected by a covering.

It is a good precaution to have the hole dug in advance of the delivery of the tree, as shown in today's Garden-Graph. A piece of canvas should be spread on the lawn and the dirt taken from the hole may be thrown upon it, thus protecting the grass. Dig the hole the desired width and depth, then loosen the hard subsoil at the bottom of it.

Fertilizer, consisting of manure or compost, can be mixed with the soil in the bottom of the hole, or, after the tree has been planted, it can be placed about it as a mulch. It can, of course, be used in both places providing care is taken to keep the manure from coming in direct contact with the tree's bare roots.

COLUMBUS IN RUNNING FOR 1942 ABC TOURNEY

DETROIT, March 29 — Annual meeting today of the American Bowling Congress, with upwards of 1,000 delegates on hand, took the spotlight in the 40th annual championships.

It was a foregone conclusion that St. Paul, Minn., would be voted as the 1941 tournament city but a hot fight for the 1942 site loomed with Columbus, O., and Indianapolis, out in front.

Four changes in the individual events were chalked up by St. Louis bowlers with Lowell Jackson, one of the top keglers of the country, feeling off a sensational 299 game. A stubborn No. 7 pin remained on the final ball cutting the St. Louis ace out of the seventh 300 game to be rolled in the national tourney.

Betting Negligible As Louis And Paychek Meet

By Lawton Carver

NEW YORK, March 29—Breaking all records, including his own, for heavyweight championship defenses, Joe Louis will risk his crown for the 10th time tonight, with the odds ranging upward all the way to 10 to 1 that he will defeat Johnny Paychek, of Des Moines, and thus survive further to stretch his string. Betting was negligible on what appeared to be one of the least violent engagements ever arranged for the tawny-pelted title-holder.

Most of the wagering, in fact, had to do with how many rounds Paychek will remain in the ring, the price being around 5 to 1 that he will have changed his venue before the 15 rounds have run their course.

Two factors entered into the assumption of a sudden termination of the festivities, one being, of course, that Paychek apparently can't fight much, or, anyhow, not well enough for the company he travels in tonight. The other thing is that Louis is always a rough and tough party bouncing back from the humiliation of a poor showing such as he made last month against Arturo Godoy.

Some recalled that Louis belted Max Schmeling out in two minutes and four seconds of the first round when they met for the second time, and there was conjecture over whether the champion might play the course even below that par this evening. This seemed to depend largely on how steamed up he might be. Few paid any attention to the supposition that he has slipped, although this fight will prove something in that respect.

A knockout for Louis will give him a record of 38 such wins in 46 professional starts, while Paychek will be aiming at his 24th knockout in his last 33 engagements, during which he has progressed from nowhere to his present eminence as challenger for the championship.

EXPERTS FIGURE NATIONAL RACE WIDE OPEN ONE

By Pat Robinson

NEW YORK, March 29—A consensus of old ball players and veteran scouts who have been knocking about the various training camps is greatly at odds with some of the roseate reports emanating from those same camps.

For instance, these old timers are by no means willing to accept the general opinion that the Cardinals have the National League pennant already sewed up. On the contrary, they foresee a wide open race, with six teams in the running, and the Reds slightly favored to repeat.

They are willing to string along with the Yanks again but no such overwhelming margin as last season and, given the breaks, even concede the Red Sox a fighting chance to win.

A thumb-nail sketch of their ideas on each team runs like this:

YANKS: Tough as ever, with Keller, Dahlgren and Gordon improving and Russo and Breuer ready to take up any slack among the veteran pitchers.

RED SOX: Ted Williams figures to be the sensation of the year and if Bagby and Wilson stand up in the box, may be tough to comb.

INDIANS: Better infield defense at short and second but Feller can't pitch every day.

TIGERS: Bartell at short improves the left side of the infield and they'll have better catching and more hitting, gained by sacrificing defense at first and left field by shifting Greenberg and York.

WHITE SOX: A nice hitting club, carrying more power, but needing pitching.

SENATORS: Fastest club in the game and if Pofahl holds up at short will have more hitting strength but they need pitching.

ATHLETICS: Slight but steady improvement all around and will be tougher for the leaders to take.

BROWNS: Hopeless.

REDS: Pitching fine and Lombardi will be back at his best and left field probably will be improved.

CARDINALS: Plenty of power but still an unsolved problem around the keystone and, highly important, will a dissatisfied Joe Medwick bear down all the way?

DODGERS: Best infield in the National League; improved outfield; but still need more pitching and another high grade catcher.

CUBS: Better spirit and slightly better all around.

GIANTS: Full of question marks. If everybody clicks, as good a chance as any. If not, could finish down with the Phillies.

PIRATES: Under Frankie Frisch, some of the older Bucs will show some pep for the first time in their lives. Frank's already yelling for pitching. Otherwise, a good club.

BEES: As Mike Gonzales once read: "Plenty field, no hit." They'll lose many a one-run game.

PHILLIES: More than hopeless. Impossible.

PERRONI CLAIMS WALKER SHOULDN'T BE TITLIST

COLUMBUS, March 29—Patsy Perroni, Canton Italian who Monday will attempt to lift the Ohio Heavyweight boxing crown from the dusky brow of Jack "Buddy" Walker, today tried to talk the undefeated Columbus Negro out of his title.

"How can Walker claim the Ohio crown?" Perroni queried. "I beat Risko, king of the Ohio heavies, before Walker dreamed of entering a ring. I've never been whipped in Ohio.

"Walker is not Ohio champ; I am. I'll prove it Monday."

McCARTHY SENDS ROOKIES TO KANSAS CITY FARM

SEBRING, Fla., March 29—Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees today released Pitchers Ernie Bonham and Charles Stanceu to Kansas City and Pitcher George Washburn, Infielder Lou Blair and Outfielder Mike Chartak to Kansas City, lightening the roster for the forthcoming jaunt into Texas. The Yanks to their embarrassment were trounced 6 to 4 by their farm hands, the Newark Bears yesterday.

PURINA CHOWS IN SEMI-FINALS OF COURT MEET

Locals Turn Back Stone's Grill Team With Fast Work Thursday

Team Play Proves Deciding Issue; New Marshfield To Be Opposed

Rated as underdogs, but playing a type of basketball that kept their taller Chillicothe foes behind from almost the first second of play, the Ralston-Purina Chows of Circleville advanced to the semi-finals Thursday evening in the Hocking County Independent Basketball tournament being conducted at Union Furnace. The Purina team turned back the strong Chillicothe Stone's Grill, 37-29, to advance. The localites, winners of the City League crown, take on New Marshfield at 8 o'clock Friday evening, the finals to be played at 10 the same evening.

Stone's Grill scored first, but couldn't stand the pace of the Purina boys and trailed 6-8 at the quarter. The Purina lads went ahead 19-13 at halftime, and held only a single point edge as the last quarter started 25-24. The Chillicotheans were never in the lead but kept the score close for the first few minutes of the last session. Holding a two point edge in the middle of the last period the Chows took time out for a discussion, then went to town for the remainder of the game.

Creighton Anderson, Purina forward, turned in one of his best performances of the year, getting nine field goals, most of them on pretty passes from his teammates. Whacker Davis, Stone's Grill manager, assigned Nick Holmes, Williams College star, to play Anderson, but Holmes couldn't do much about the Purina youth's shooting. Brilliant teamplay by all members of the Purina outfit brought the victory rather than the work of any one youth.

Taggert and Henson were high for Stone's Grill with 12 and 10 points respectively.

Box score:

Purina Chows-37	G	F	Stone's Grill-26	G	F
Gulick, f	4	1	Fisher, f	1	0

BEN HOGAN CLAIMS TOP PRIZE TO CAROLINA OPEN

GREENSBORO, N. C., March 29—Ben Hogan, of White Plains, N. J., today took his place among the all-time greats of golf as he pocketed the $1,200 first prize money in the $5,000 Greensboro Open tournament.

Hogan captured the tourney yesterday by shooting a 5-below par 66 on the morning round, and a 67 on the afternoon round, to give him a 72-hole score of 270—14 strokes below par. This was one stroke better than the record set in 1938 by Sam Snead of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa.

Hogan's best shot was a drive off the No. 7 tee which struck the flag 225 yards away for a sure birdie. Craig Wood, Hamaroneck, N. Y., collected the $750 second money with a score of 279.

Ralph Guldahl, Johnny Revolta, Byron Nelson and Paul Runyan got $412 apiece in a four-way tie for third place.

BONURA SIGNS; GIANTS SHUT OUT CINCINNATI

WINTER HAVEN, Fla., March 29—Zeke Bonura had made his peace with the New York Giants today. After weeks of bickering, Bonura signed a contract last night, just in time to start on the road with the team. It was believed he got something beyond the $10,000 against which he was holding out. Hy Vandenberg, a Jersey City recruit, looked impressive yesterday as he helped Cliff Melton shut out the Cincinnati Reds 8 to 0.

ZALE'S TITLE CHANCES HINGE ON BROWN BOUT

CHICAGO, March 29 — Tony Zale, of Gary, Ind., rated No. 2 among the middleweight challengers, and Ben Brown, of Atlanta, Ga., today were set for a ten-round battle on the outcome of which Zale's title hopes may rest.

ROTARIANS, YOUTHS HEAR JUVENILE DELINQUENCY QUESTION DISCUSSED

CAPTAIN HAYS OF INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL TALKS

Children Are Individuals And Must Be Treated As Such, Civic Club Hears

F. E. BARNHILL NOMINATED

Committee Proposes Slate Of Officers To Serve In Next Year

Thirty-three boys ranging from eight to 15 years old were guests of the Rotary Club at its Thursday meeting in the American Hotel to hear Captain H. L. Hays, superintendent of the Boys Industrial School at Lancaster, address the gathering on "Juvenile Delinquency."

Prior to Captain Hays address, President William Radcliff announced the nominees selected by the nominating committee to serve as officers of the club during the year 1940-41. The nominees selected by the committee are Frank E. Barnhill, president; Rev. Robert T. Kelsey and Harry Heffner, vice president; Charles T. Gilmore and Charles Goeller, secretary; D. D. Dowden and John A. Ryan, treasurer, Robert L. Brehmer, Harry Hill, Charles Little and Dr. Edward L. Montgomery, directors.

Opening his address, Captain Hays told the Rotarians and their guests that the primary reason children get into difficulties is that they are so seldom recognized an individuals. He said that children should be remembered as such and the thought should be borne in mind that each child, having individual problems, makes it difficult for him to abide always to the group rules.

Boys, Girls Need Help

"Boys and girls just don't grow up," he remarked. "They need help and guidance in the process. If they are children who live in their own homes, the responsibility lies with the parents, the schools and the churches. If the children are not living in their own homes it is the job of the state or local subdivision's institutions to provide that guidance."

After outlining the types of homes and kinds of aid that are provided for children, Captain Hays discussed the work of the Boys' Industrial School at Lancaster. At present there are 800 boys at the institution and another 800 are on parole, he informed the group.

"The reason that boys usually come to Lancaster is that adults don't understand the problems of young people. We, at Lancaster, try to rehabilitate the boys that come to us, not punish them. The idea that our purpose is to punish is entirely false," Captain Hays continued.

Hunt Difficulties

"Our job, like that of the juvenile judge, is to discover what the boys' difficulties are. If we can't find those difficulties and correct them so that the boy will become a good citizen then we have failed."

That 57 percent of the boys come to Lancaster because of broken homes was a fact to which Captain Hays pointed. Others come there because of one misstep that they might have made. In cases like that they should be guided and advised rather than be sent to the school, he told the group.

"Juvenile judges are beginning to realize that fact and instead of sending them to us immediately are trying to work more closely with the boys in their own areas, forgiving them a mistake and trying to show them how it was made," Captain Hays remarked.

"Boys get into difficulties because they fall in with bad companions. Playing hookey from school is another principle cause. When they play hookey they have to spend their time with others who have done the same thing.

"Musunderstanding of parents by the children is another difficulty that tends toward juvenile delinquency. Children should be made to understand why parents want them home early in the evenings and why certain demands are put on them," he continued.

Captain Hays then spoke of the question of rehabilitation of the boys once they have returned home from the school. He realized that there is a certain stigma attached to boys who have been there, but he asked the Rotarians to recognize the fact that the boys are not criminals and that every effort should be made to remove a false impression.

Communities Vital

"Give them a helping hand and extend to them an opportunity to make good. Remember that rehabilitation must take place in the communities from which the boys have come as well as at Lancaster," he concluded.

Probate Judge Lemuel Weldon, Juvenile Officer Frank C. Goff and Harry Grove, clerk of the Probate Court, were guests at the luncheon also.

POLISH PASTOR EXECUTED FOR PART IN MURDER

TRENTON, N. J., March 29—A grave beside that of his daughter, Wanda, 18, for whose murder he was executed last night in the electric chair, today awaited the body of the Rev. Walter Dworecki, 49, a Polish evangelist.

Buoyed up by hours of praying, Dworecki went calmly to his death at 8:04 last night mumbling passages from the scriptures. He was the first clergyman executed in New Jersey since 1907 when the electric chair came into use.

Dworecki was convicted of arranging for the murder of Wanda to collect between $5,000 and $6,000 insurance on her life. Peter Schewchuck, 21, a circus roustabout who, police charge did the actual strangling for the promise of a $100 fee on which he received only 50 cents, is awaiting trial.

KENNEDY NAME FIGHT RESULTS IN INJUNCTION

COLUMBUS, March 29—The battle of the two Cuyahoga County Kennedys, each seeking the Democratic nomination for secretary of state, was in the Franklin County Common Pleas Court for settlement today.

Judge Dana F. Reynolds granted a temporary injunction, pending hearing of the case, which enjoined Secretary of State Earl Griffith from placing the name of Earl Kennedy, North Olmstead, on the ballot at the May 14 primary. The suit followed Griffith's refusal to ban Earl Kennedy's name from the ballot.

The other candidate, John J. Kennedy, Cleveland attorney, had asked that Earl Kennedy's name be barred because his nominating petitions reportedly bore signatures of unregistered voters.

Health Office Receives Gift of Florida Oranges

Dr. A. D. Blackburn, Secretary Harriet Henness, and Nurse Margaret Hunsicker, the staff of the county health department, should be gushing with vitamins and glowing with that look of health for the next few weeks. They have embarked on a program of digesting loads of ultra violet rays that have been packed into the sun kissed oranges of Florida.

The Railway Express Company delivered a bushel basket of oranges to the office Thursday, the gift of W. E. Lamb, member of the county board of health, who is vacationing in the sunny South.

There was a goodly crowd in the health department's office Thursday and between the drip of orange juice from chin to floor and the flying of orange peels to the wastebasket it was learned that the fruit came directly from the famous Indian Rock Orange Groves near Clearwater.

Almost inaudible amidst the gurgling of the juice was the information that Mr. Lamb sends a similar basket almost every year when he winters in Florida. Last year's basket contained grapefruits and tangerines as well as oranges, but this year only the latter fruit arrived.

The fruit, large and sweet, was most welcome, it was explained, since the juice of citrus fruits is most beneficial in fighting the ravages of the common cold in the springtime. Health came to the health department hidden under a bushel.

TWO SEPARATE PROBES OF MINE TRAGEDY START

NEFFS, O., March 29 — Two separate investigations, seeking the cause of the blast that ripped through the Willow Grove mine March 16 and claimed the lives of 72 men, got under way today.

A formal, 12-man board was to begin its probe with a trip through the shattered workings, and then question survivors of the explosion. Belmont County Coroner Clyde C. Hardesty said he would conduct a separate inquest.

Two possible causes of the blast were advanced for consideration—that drillers unwittingly struck an abandoned gas well, or that coal dust in the mine became ignited. The significance of a shattered powder keg found near the scene of the blast was to be studied.

Members of the 12-man committee included George A. Strain, Ohio industrial relations director; Nelson Hovey, assistant director; J. J. Forbes, federal mine inspector, R. L. Hanna, president of the Hanna Coal Co., operators of the mine; county, mine and United Mine Workers officials, deputy mine inspectors, and an explosive expert.

EX-CONVICT, 39, KILLED BY GUN OF POLICEMAN

CINCINNATI, March 29—Shot by an officer who surprised him in a filling station, Elmer Hoffman, 39, an ex-convict, was dead today.

Hoffman was shot by Patrolman Marvin Campbell. The officer said he fired three shots and Hoffman fell to the ground.

"Then," Hoffman related, "He begged me not to shoot any more. Then I walked closer to him. When I was within three feet of him, he suddenly fired at me. I then fired the remaining bullets in my revolver."

JR. FAIR BOARD NAMES BRADLEY AS ITS LEADER

At the reorganization meeting Thursday night of the Junior Fair Board, G. D. Bradley, teacher at the Pickaway and Jackson schools, was reelected chairman for the coming year.

Kenneth Holtrey, teacher at the Walnut Township school, was elected vice president while the office of secretary-treasurer went to George D. McDowell, county superintendent of schools.

Dr. Glen D. Phillips, Circleville, offered his resignation from the board at the meeting. He asked that the resignation be effective immediately and said that it was necessary because of the press of other affairs.

No successor to take over Dr. Phillip's work with the Boy Scouts has been named.

FERGUSON SENDS LETTERS ASKING SOLONS' MONEY

COLUMBUS, March 29 — Letters asking repayment to the state treasury on mileage fees collected during a five-months recess of the Ohio Legislature were mailed today to 25 members of the 1936 senate by State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson.

The only other living member of that senate who collected fees in the famous "mileage grab," Verner E. Metcalf, Marietta, has already presented Ferguson with a check for $194.40.

The sums which Ferguson asked of the senators ranged from $69 to $302, according to the distance supposed to have been traveled between their homes and Columbus for the non-existent legislative sessions. The amounts totaled $5,464.

When the injunction suit of Arnett Harbage, West Jefferson farmer and self-styled "watchdog of the Ohio Treasury," reached the supreme court, that tribunal ruled that the senators were not entitled to the payments. The decision also blocked the payment of $21,507 in similar grants to members of the 1936 House of Representatives.

Metcalf, now serving in an executive capacity with the bureau of unemployment compensation, and several other senators said they would lose money because of the decision. They contended that they had spent various sums attending committee sessions during the legislative recess.

Their only recourse for legal reimbursement, it was said, would be the presentation of a sundry claim to some future session of the legislature.

April is usually the wettest month of the year, but when there's a political campaign on most of the mud-slinging takes place in October.

OHIO BUSINESS LEADERS MEET IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, March 29—Ohio businessmen and congressmen met today in Washington for the third annual national legislative conference.

Purpose of the conference, sponsored by the Ohio Chamber of Commerce, was to present to legislators a three-point program relating to issues now before Congress. They are:

1. The Logan-Walter bill, which prescribes uniform procedure for federal regulatory bureaus and makes their rules and regulations reviewable by the courts before becoming effective.
2. Amendments to the National Labor Relations act.
3. Appropriations for the fiscal year 1941.

"Our sole object in this conference is to assist in making the world a better place to live in," A. Graves Williams, president of the Ohio chamber said. "We are not asking for special privileges. We are asking for action that will be beneficial to the world as a whole."

Scheduled speakers at a meeting tonight included: F. G. Crawford, Cleveland manufacturer and president of that city's chamber of commerce; Freeman T. Eagleson, Columbus attorney, and Ralph P. Ward, member of the staff of the Ohio chamber.

5,000 TO MEET AS REPUBLICANS DRAW PROGRAM

COLUMBUS, March 29 — Arrangements were completed today for a two-day "rally" of Republicans leaders and party members which is expected to bring together in Columbus next Tuesday and Wednesday 5000 persons from all parts of the state.

Three speakers will be in the lime light as the state GOP organization gathers to review its accomplishments and make plans for this year's state and national campaigns. They are U. S. Sen. Robert A. Taft, "favorite son" candidate for the GOP presidential nomination; Governor Bricker, candidate for re-election, and Kenneth P. Simpson, a member of the party's state committee in New York.

Simpson, representing the national committee, will speak at the afternoon session Wednesday, while Taft and Bricker will appear on the evening program.

The three candidates for the Republican nomination for U. S. Senator will be given an opportunity to speak briefly Wednesday afternoon. They are Congressman Dudley A. White, of Norwalk, Mayor Harold H. Burton, of Cleveland, and C. E. Wharton of Kenton.

Nazis Say British Air Force Falsifying Facts Of German Area Raiding

NEW YORK, March 29—Discrepancies between German and Allied claims regarding military engagements can be explained by the alleged court martial and suicide of a British aviator, accused of giving false reports of air successes, it was asserted today in a German broadcast intercepted by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The International News Service London bureau reported that the London Daily Mail on March 20 reported that Wing Commander Richard Blomfield committed suicide by gas at his Farnborough home and that he died without knowing the decision of a court martial which he faced three weeks previously. Findings at the time of Blomfield's death were not promulgated and the Daily Mail made no mention of the charges against him.

(An air ministry spokesman stated that the trial was held in Camera and that the charges were not made public. He declined further comment.)

The broadcast, directed to "American listeners," cited what it said was an article in the London Daily Mail regarding the British airman. Here, in part, is the German broadcast:

"The London Daily newspaper Daily Mail printed the sensational report today that a British flight commander, Richard Graham Bromfield, committed suicide in his cell while awaiting the verdict of his court martial. . . .

"Flight Commander Bromfield was arrested a short time ago charged with having submitted to the air ministry false reports concerning alleged successes scored in the Bay of Helgoland against German war planes.

"The report submitted to his superiors after returning from the Bay of Helgoland boasted of successes that had never taken place, of destroyed German planes that had never flown out and of bombing achievements which were the product of imagination.

"Following the trial of the court martial, Flight Commander Richard Graham Bromfield killed himself in his cell by taking poison.

"Meanwhile the Daily Mail has seized the occasion to point out recent simialar cases. One in particular has aroused considerable attention in London. A Royal Air Force officer, D. P. C. P. Wood, was dismissed from the Royal Air Force a short time ago for submitting reports of spectacular air victories which were later found to have been invented by him. . . .

"American radio listeners can rest assured that before long the discrepancy between the German high command's naval bulletins and those issued by Mr. Winston Churchill in all probability will expose the same sensational explanation as the one that has now exposed Sir Kingsley Wood's (British air secretary) spectacular victories in the air to be pure fiction."

FATHER ADMITS KILLING INFANT FOUND IN SACK

PHILADELPHIA, March 29—Cracking under the strain of persistent questioning, Michael Menichella confessed today that he killed his infant daughter with a butcher knife because the "witches made me," detectives said.

The purported confession of the 40-year-old relief worker, who for 24 hours had insisted stoutly that "witches and a big black dog" were responsible for the murder of his 16-day-old daughter, Beatrice, was disclosed by Detective Sergeant Daniel Cronin.

The child's body—her head almost severed—was found in a sack in a coal bin of her home by patrolmen shortly after the Menichellas reported the baby kidnaped.

CCC JOINS HUNT FOR COON REICHLEY

AGED HOCKING 'SANTA CLAUS' MISSING MONTH

30 Enrollees Join Sheriff Joe Farbeann In Effort To Find Clues

SON EXPRESSES WORRY

Search Of Home Fails To Reveal Evidence Of Whereabouts

LOGAN, O., March 29—Thirty CCC enrollees, aided by Sheriff Joe Farbeann, today took up the search in the deep hollows of the Hocking Parks district for some clue to the disappearance of Conrad H. (Coon) Reichley, 76. Reichley, who has a large flowing white beard, played Santa Claus in Logan every Christmas.

He has been missing since March 7.

In an interview of Ranger S. A. Reichley, Old Man's cave, a Logan newspaper was given all the facts concerning the disappearance that he could muster. He had made a trip to Roseville, Crooksville and Zanesville earlier in the week but none of the relatives or friends had seen the aged man in those cities.

Telephone calls to other surrounding towns and cities have failed to furnish a clue as to his whereabouts. He had told the ranger son that he planned to visit another son, William, of Columbus on March 24, but a call there disclosed he had not been seen.

Is Widely Known

Marked by his gray locks and flowing white beard, he was known by thousands in this district. No reports have been received from any of his acquaintances by relatives or by officers who have joined in the effort to find "Santa Claus" and he is known to them, since he started to portray that character in Logan some years ago during the holiday season.

The fact that the aged man failed to have his name listed among the Republican candidates for central committeeman from Benton Township made the son apprehensive last week. He had circulated his petition and was planning to present it to the

PORTSMOUTH, March 29 — State police today expressed the belief that an incipient juvenile crime wave in southwestern Ohio counties was broken up by the arrest of three Wilmington youths whose companion was accidentally killed in a quick getaway after a robbery.

Patrol Corp. John W. Brooks said the three boys, Robert Abbott, 18; Orville Hampton, 20, and William Harrison, 17, have confessed robbing William McKee, a West Union grocery truck driver, of $150 Monday night in a carefully planned holdup.

A fourth youth, John Baldwin, 17, was mortally wounded, Brooks said, when Abbott recklessly tossed a shotgun into the bandit car, the impact discharging the weapon and fatally wounding Baldwin.

The wounded youth was abandoned on the doorstep of a West Union physician but was dead when the doctor found him. His

GERMANS CLAIM SIX MERCHANT SHIPS DAMAGED

BERLIN, March 29 — Six merchant vessels were damaged, a seventh was set on fire and a patrol boat was sunk by German warplanes which bombed a British convoy near the Shetland Islands last night, the German high command announced today.

(The British admiralty contended only one German plane participated in the attack and that no damage resulted.)

Details regarding the attack were contained in the German war communique, which stated:

"There was nothing particular on the Western Front.

"The German air force which attacked a British convoy off the Shetland Islands damaged six merchant ships, set fire to one merchantman and sank one patrol boat."

A previous announcement said the German planes also attacked a French destroyer in the English Channel.

The attack was carried out last night despite adverse weather conditions, according to the announcement, which added:

"The German battle planes dispersed the convoy, hitting several ships with bombs. All the German planes returned undamaged to their bases.

"Reconnoitering continued throughout the day over the North Sea, Britain and France, yielding valuable results despite strong defensive action. Two reconnoitering planes failed to return to their home bases."

F. D., JR. PAYS $13.50 ON SPEEDING CHARGE

WILMINGTON, Del., March 29 —Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., son of the President, left $13.50 fine and costs here today after pleading guilty to charges of speeding on Glasgow Road enroute to New York.

Young Roosevelt was picked up by Private William Leach and taken before Magistrate William B. Davis, of New Castle.

"There is no excuse for it, but I was in a hurry for an appointment in New York and did not realize the speed," Davis quoted him as saying.

FATE OF TRADE TREATIES RESTS ON VIC DONAHEY

Ohio Senator May Decide Reciprocal Issue Now Before Congress

INFORMED POLLS HEARD

One Says That New Deal Has Sufficient Support To Win Approval

WASHINGTON, March 29 — Tall, grey-haired Vic Donahey of Ohio, who keeps his own counsel and is retiring from politics this summer, was "spotted" today as perhaps the key man in the impending senate votes on the Roosevelt-Hull reciprocal trade treaty program.

So evenly were opposing lines drawn that both sides admitted Senator Donahey, a Democrat, might cast the deciding ballot on the Pittman amendment requiring senate ratification of the trade pacts. Neither side professed to know the Ohio senator's decision.

A unanimous consent agreement scheduled the roll-call on the Pittman amendment at 4 p. m.

Adoption of the ratification measure would effectually negate the entire treaty program, if the house concurred. Its rejection would point to unhampered adoption of the pending resolution to extend the treaty law three years beyond its June 12 expiration date. The house already has approved extension.

MONEY OF PEN, CONVICTS TAKEN AT STATE FARM

LONDON, March 29—The Madison County prosecutor has been asked by Superintendent W. F. Amrine to investigate with a view to grand jury action charges that state funds and those of prisoners at the London prison farm have been embezzled by convicts, it was disclosed today.

Reports of shortages have been current for some time and, according to the superintendent, they were verified by state examiners. An investigation was prompted by complaints of prisoners to the state welfare department that they were not credited with all the money to which they were entitled. The shortage was said to approximate $1200.

It also was revealed that Thad D. Plummer, of Putnam County, who was released last June on parole, has been returned to the prison farm on the basis of facts uncovered during the investigation.

Plummer was returned soon after Attorney General Thomas J.

27 Taken To Homes In South

Two Families On Relief Removed By County To Legal Residences

Removal of 27 additional persons from Pickaway County to their legal residences in Kentucky and West Virginia was completed Thursday by the Pickaway County relief office working in conjunction with the sheriff's office. The move was made in an effort to relieve the county's relief load.

Twenty-two of the persons carted away are members of one family, residing in one house on a Wayne Township farm for the last several months. They include grandparents, parents, children and in-laws, five of the group being adults and the other 17 children. They were taken to Greenup, Ky., where D. H. Marcy, relief director, said they legally belong.

The other five persons were taken to Huntington, W. Va. from Wayne Township also.

Marcy said that removal of these 27 boosts the total of persons restored to their legal residences to more than 250 in the last several years.

The removals are made in trucks for which the county pays the expense. "But the expense is a minor item compared with the amount these non-resident relievers cost the county," Marcy said.

He was assisted Thursday by Deputy Sheriff Earl Weaver.

MORE TALKS PLANNED

Under Secretary May Go To Georgia Retreat With The President

WASHINGTON, March 29—President Roosevelt today resumed his conferences with Secretary of State Hull and Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles on the report which the astute Welles brought back from Europe's warring nations.

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt scheduled his first cabinet meeting in three weeks, recent ones having been cancelled because of a cold which kept the chief executive in bed.

WASHINGTON, March 29—President Roosevelt today studied a comprehensive report on the odds of war or peace in Europe, compiled by his most astute diplomatic observer and based on the direct statements of the "big four" in old world politics.

But whether the President would use his newly-gained information as the basis for some dramatic move in the chaotic international game was one of the most closely-guarded secrets in the history of Washington officialdom. White House and State Department spokesmen not only refused to speculate on the President's future course themselves, but sharply warned the press against speculation.

The long-awaited report of Sumner Welles, under secretary of state, on war prospects in Europe was handed to Mr. Roosevelt last night during a conference with Welles and Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Welles' observations were based on a month-long tour of Europe, during which he talked intimately with Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany, the then Premier Edouard Daladier of France, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain and Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy. Thus his

The annual inspection of Scioto Commandery No. 35, Knights Templars, by Judson C. King of Lisbon, eminent grand senior warden of the Grand Commandery of Ohio, was conducted Thursday evenng in Masonic Temple. A short business session preceded an excellent dinner at 6:30 p. m. served by the ladies of the Eastern Star.

After dinner the "Order of the Temple" was exemplified in a manner which elicited the praise of the inspecting officer and distinguished guests from the Grand Commandery and the following chapters, Garfield No. 28, Washington C. H.; Englewood No. 59, Chicago; Mount Vernon No. 1, Columbus; Lancaster No. 2, Lancaster; Columbus No. 69, Columbus; Chillicothe No. 8, Chillicothe; St. Luke's No. 34, Newark; Calvary No. 13, Portsmouth; Logan No. 78, Logan; Miami, No. 22, Lebanon; St. John's No. 20, Youngstown, and Crusade No. 23, Mexico, Mo.

ST. BERNARD PUP BITES BOY; 25 STITCHES USED

POMEROY, O., March 29—Sixteen year old Don Mullen was given anti-rabies treatment today after being bitten and badly mangled by his 165-pound St. Bernard pup.

"June Mad", Junior Class Play, Provides Highly Entertaining Evening at School

By Lyall Cryder

"June Mad", the delightful three act comedy presented Thursday by a splendid cast of members of the Junior class of Circleville High School, kept the capacity audience roaring with laughter during the entire evening. The fast moving play practically made heads spin with the effort to get the snappy lines.

Each character was absorbed in a problem. As the solutions to these were worked out, the youthful actors ran true to type in a manner which left nothing to be desired by the highly entertained audience.

All acts of the play took place in the living room of the Woods' home in Lynbrook, a small town in the Middlewest, the action of the plot being confined to three June days of one week.

Penny Wood, the daughter of the house, a slightly moonstruck, 'teenage girl, was very convincing in her thrills of happiness and doldrums of disappointments during the course of the plot. Chuck Harris, who built himself a glider, had youthful troubles involving a father with little sympathy for his hobby, and a case on Penny, who was for the moment attracted by Roger Van Vleck, a college friend of her uncle, G. Mervyn Roberts. Van Vleck, a fast worker, had a special line which he used on the 'women'.

Mrs. Wood, the mother, passed her time helping everyone, especially Effie the cook, who never could get her meals prepared for the additional guests appearing just as the family was ready to be seated. Effie's real problem, however, was the adjustment of her slip. Playing the part of the general factotum of the house, Elmer Tuttle was so thoroughly in character that he almost stole the show, much as the audience was intrigued by the love interest of the plot.

Milly Lou, the problem child who 'hung around', made life miserable for Roger Van Vleck with her attentions.

Dr. Wood was the busy physician, leaving all home problems to his wife. Mr. Harris presented a real showing as the puzzled widower left with two children to bring up. Not alone did he face the

CONTRABAND IS STUDIED

Steamers Held By Allies In Hong Kong Port For Last Two Months

LONDON, March 29—Two Soviet steamers detained by British authorities at the Hong Kong contraband station for more than two months are being handed over to French authorities, the British ministry of economic warfare announced today.

A communique stated:

"The Soviet ships Selenga and Vladimir Mayakovsky, which were intercepted in Far Eastern waters and brought to Hong Kong on suspicion of carrying contraband destined for Germany, are being handed over to French authorities.

"The Allied navies have always acted in close cooperation regarding contraband control. The present case is one of those in which, for administrative reasons, it is convenient to transfer the ships from custody of one ally to the other.

"Neither of these ships has been released. Examinations for the purpose of contraband control have not yet been completed."

The communique served to deny reports from Hong Kong that the 2,492 ton Selenga, which was intercepted January 13 while carrying tin and antimony to the Russian port of Vladivostok, had been released with its cargo intact.

Detention of the vessels by British authorities caused Ivan Maisky, Russian ambassador to London, to lodge informal, verbal protests with British Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, who told the Russian diplomat the situation would be investigated.

The 2,261-ton Vladimir Mayakovsky was intercepted while en route to Vladivostok with copper loaded at Manzanillo, Mexico and San Pedro, Cal.

British newspapers charged yesterday that contraband goods from the United States were finding their way to Germany via Mexico and Russia. The London Daily Herald commented:

"Now this is going to be stopped."

State-Wide Recognition Of Arbor Week Is Urged

COLUMBUS, March 29—In keeping with Governor Bricker's proclamation, setting aside the month of April as "conservation month" in Ohio, plans are going forward in the Division of Conservation to develop state-wide recognition for observance, on the part of various groups and organizations, in addition to the educational and tree-planting projects already arranged in the public schools.

Radio programs on many stations are planned. All service clubs, luncheon clubs, women's clubs, labor organizations, and business men as well as farmers are requested to take part. The Junior Chamber of Commerce, all golf clubs in Ohio, sportsmen's organizations, the Grange, the Farm Bureau, 4-H Clubs, Future Farmers of America, Boy and Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and kindred organizations as well as the churches of the State are being asked to arrange programs during the month in behalf of conservation of all natural resources. The newspapers of Ohio and various weekly magazines and journals are especially urged to devote editorial space to the program.

Churches May Aid

Conservation Commissioner Don Waters points out that the churches have an opportunity to play a most influential part and that conservation sermons from the pulpit will be in keeping with our responsibility to God and Nature for the resources that have been given to us in trust. "In the beginning God gave man dominion over the fowls of the air and the beasts of the field, and over all things of the Out-of-Doors, including the forests, the lands, the waters, minerals, and renewable as well as non-renewable resources. As custodians, we are responsible for the disposition we make of that trust," the conservation commissioner stated. "And in addition, it means the conservation of human values and conservation of our ideals of Americanism," he said.

The first week of April has been set aside in the schools of Ohio as Conservation Week, with special emphasis on Arbor Day and Bird Day, April 5.

It is expected that all organizations interested in conservation of natural resources, as a patriotic duty to the commonwealth and to America, will seek the aid of the Division of Conservation for observance of the month of April as Conservation Month. "Conservation is something that reaches every home and every fireside. Every organized group in Ohio can contribute a program of some kind during the month in an effort to awaken a consciousness of conservation needs, and to develop a conservation conscience in Ohio."

Practically every department of State Government, in addition to the Division of Conservation, will be called upon to take a part in observance of Conservation Month.

CORN CROP MAY BECOME VITAL FOR SWEETENING

That we might look to "the enormous corn crops for the future supply of sweets for the nation" was the prediction of E. J. Seukle, commercial chemist when he described "sweetose" a new sweetening agent made from corn, to the National Farm Chemurgic Conference in Chicago.

"Sweetose will make a market for many millions of bushels of corn per year," Seukle said. "Corn is our greatest farm crop and in fact our most serious surplus crop."

Although a patent has been applied for and the process is still secret, he said the syrup was made by a novel modification of the ordinary corn syrup manufacture. Data is now available on theuses of sweetose in juices, tomatoes, jellies, jams, preserves, wines, frozen fruits and other products. Tests are being completed on the use of the new product in sweetened condensed milk, ice cream, ices, chocolate milk and other frozen desserts.

"In all tests the product has shown is versatility and ability not only to reduce costs but produce products having certain advantages over those formerly in use," Suekle said.

Sweetose, he said, had double the sweetness of corn syrup, was not as sticky and was non-crystalizing.

"Since through the conversion of corn starches to sugars we can produce sweetening agents equally as nutritious and nearly as sweet as those obtained by the importation of foreign grown sucrose, what is more logical than to look to the enormous corn crop for the future supply of sweets for the nation," he said.

FAYETTE COUNTY TO NEED BONDS FOR ITS RELIEF

WASHINGTON C. H., March 29—Fayette county officials said that a special tax levy of $25,000 may be necessary in the county to carry out the relief program for the latter half of the year. "As far as relief expenditures are concerned, the county will be broke by May 1 and issuance of delinquent tax notes would carry another six weeks, but that would be all," County Auditor Ray Baughn said.

Following the path of the Sears-Nichols plant of Circleville, the Chillicothe unit of the concern is going on the block April 11 when the equipment and real estate will be sold.

The plants in Circleville and Chillicothe have been operating for three generations. Operations had ceased at the Circleville plant several years ago and the factory is being torn down.

CHURCH COUNCIL PLANS DRAMATIC SERVICE SUNDAY

Three Teams Invade City To Present Plays In Parish House Of St. Philip's

TWO JUDGES ANNOUNCED

Six Purposes Of Ohio-Wide Competition Disclosed By Officials

A dramatic program that promises to be highly interesting will be presented in the parish house of St. Philip's Episcopal Church Sunday at 2:30 p. m. with the public invited.

The program is a part of the fifth annual Religious Drama Festival of Ohio Youth sponsored by the Ohio Council of Religious Educatin. A. T. Arnold, executive secretary of the Ohio Council, said that St. Philip's Church had been chosen because of the stage in its parish house that will permit dramatic teams from three cities to present their productions.

Appearing on the program will be dramatic teams from Somerset, representing Perry County; Portsmouth, representing Scioto County, and Columbus, representing Franklin County. The titles of dramas to be presented will be: "No Banners Flying", "A Sign Unto You", and "Father Forgive", respectively.

The dramatic team determined to be the winner will go to Columbus for final competition April 13 and 14.

Judges of the Sunday competition will be Kingsley Povenmire of Cincinnati, state chairman of the festival, and Roy H. Bowen of Columbus. Both are former Circleville High School instructors.

The program will be of great interest to high school pupils who are studying speaking, debate and drama since criticisms will be offered at the end of each presentation, the judges and others to participate.

The purposes of the religious drama programs are:

1. To promote a larger use of the Religious Drama as a spiritual and educational experience in the Church.
2. To raise the standard of Religious Drama.
3. To afford to groups of young people a dynamic means by which they may serve their church and their community.
4. To afford to groups of young people a method by which they may become interpreters of the Christian message.
5. To develop a more sympathetic understanding among the young people of different denominations in community, county and state and to lead these young people to think and work together cooperatively.
6. To encourage creative writing of Religious Drama.

The Continuing Task

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Newman Campbell

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for March 31 is Matthew 28:16-20, the Golden Text being Acts 1:8, "Ye shall be my witness . . . unto the uttermost part of the earth.")

IT IS conceded that there were ten times in all in which our Lord appeared to his disciples after His resurrection, from the first one, early Easter morning at the tomb where He appeared to the Marys, until the time He was taken up to heaven, forty days later.

John tells us that the same evening of the day He had been seen by Mary Magdalene. He appeared to His eleven apostles, as they were gathered together with closed doors for fear of the Jews. In an instant Jesus stood in their midst, saying, "Peace be unto you." And He showed them His hands and side. "Then were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord," says John.

One of them, however, Thomas, was not present at this time and he refused to believe when told, "We have seen the Lord." "Except I shall see in His hands the prints of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand unto His side. I will not believe," he stated. After eight days the disciples were again gathered together and Thomas was with them, and Jesus stood again in their midst and told Thomas to reach thither his finger and "behold my hands, and reach thither thy hand, and thrust it into My side; and be not faitless, but believing."

Thomas' answer was, "My Lord and my God!" Jesus said: "Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed."

In John we also find the story of the apostles' flashing trip, when Jesus appeared on the beach. Simon Peter had said he was going fishing, and four others said they would go with him. Then went in a ship and fished all night but caught nothing. When the morning came, Jesus stood on the beach, but the disciples knew Him not. He calle dto them, "Children, have ye any meat?" and they answered no.

Then He told them where to cast their net, and when they did as He said, it was so heavy they could not draw it to land. One said to Peter, "It is the Lord." When Peter heard that he cast himself into the sea to swim to shore and the others dragged the net in. When they came to land they found a fire going on the sand and bread and fish spread out, and Jesus called them to "come and dine."

The last recorded time Jesus came to His disciples as they were gathered in a room with closed doors. He said to them: "All authority hath been given unto Me in heaven and on earth.

"Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit;

"Teaching them to observe all things whatsover I commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

St. Mark says: "So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, He was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God."

And of the disciples he says: "And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with him, and confirming the word with signs following."

That is the work millions of followers of these disciples have been engaged in all these years since that time. Missionaries have gone to far countries trying to save those who never before had heard of Christianity. David Livingstone was one of these. His work in Africa is well known, and has been called to the attention of the people of this generation recently by a motion picture which showed him in that once so-called "dark continent." His labors ended when he died of fever contracted in the jungles and swamps of that continent. Such men have found, truly, that Christ has been with them in their labors and has helped them.

Talks To Continue

It was thought likely that the Roosevelt - Welles conversation would be continued today or tomorrow, although Welles said that no definite appointment at the White House had yet been scheduled.

Before Sunday the President is expected to leave for Warm Springs, Ga., to recuperate from a tenacious cold. Welles may be asked to accompany him there.

There was one indication that Mr. Roosevelt might break his silence today on the Welles report. His regular Friday press conference, normally held in mid-morning, was set back to 4 p. m. If the President planned any public comment on European conditions, observers pointed out, he probably would want time to digest the report and possibly discuss it with members of his cabinet before making any statement.

The curiosity inspired by Pandora's Box was mild compared to that aroused by the small, tan dispatch case which Welles brought back from Europe. This curiosity is not confined to the press, for foreign embassies here have been seeking dicreetly, through every possible channel of information, for some inkling of what Welles reported.

An attempt to curb speculation was made by the White House last night in a highly unusual manner. Stephen T. Early, one of Mr. Roosevelt's secretaries, advised correspondents not to go out on "any limbs" in their dispatches today.

None Have Reports

"Neither the secretary of state nor the under secretary will have any word to say following their conference to the press or to their friends or to any one anywhere," Early said.

Some officials, recalling Mr. Roosevelt's appeals on three separate occasions to European leaders in an effort to prevent the present war, believe that he would be glad to offer a peace plan if he thought it had a reasonable chance of acceptance. Such a diplomatic coup, if successful, would underscore the President's name in world history and enhance Democratic chances of success in this year's elections.

But those who scoff at a "peace plan" point out that Great Britain and France repeatedly have declared they would not accept any settlement that left Germany under Hitler or in a military position for further conquests. At the same time, Germany has made it clear that it will give up nothing it has gained in Europe, and will ask for economic concessions and colonies as the price for peace.

seven senators out of the running because of absence or pairs, one poll gave the administration a 46-43 victory over the ratification backers; the other placed the count at 44-44, with Donahey in the middle and still uncommitted.

This situation, anticipating 89 votes, precluded the possibility of a tie which would permit Vice President Garner to cast his vote, but even this was not "nailed down." Sen. Andrews (D) Fla., not only was absent, but couldn't be located by telephone. Some members said he might be enroute to Washington to cast his ballot.

Administration forces predicted they would win. Ratification advocates reluctantly admitted it "looked bad" for them, but senate Republican Leader McNary warned. "We still have a fighting chance to win on the ratification amendment.

Sen. Glass To Vote

The ratification faction was cheered by several announcements of support, one coming from Virginia's peppery octogenarian, Sen. Carter Glass.

"Of course I shall vote for ratification," said Glass. "Of course these agreements are treaties, and of course the constitution requires that they be ratified by the senate."

The excellent work of the entire cast showed the careful direction of Samuel Johnson, high school dramatics coach, and the expending of many hours of exhausting drill. The play moved so smoothly that it ceased to seem like a play, but rather the real developments of family life.

Anyone will get plenty of entertainment out of this production, which is to be repeated tonight in the high school auditorium. Not only will you see a play, but you will review many of your own youthful trials and tragedies as the plot unfolds.

The cast of the Thursday production includes Penny Wood, Norma Jean Brown; Chuck Harris, James Callihan; Mrs. Wood, Marjorie Friece; Elmer Tuttle, William Thornton; Dr. Wood, Charles Mumaw; Effie, Peggy Goeller; Milly Lou, Mary Schreiner; G. The business staff of the production includes Robert Brown and Sam Stubbs as co-managers, Mark Coffland, Jane Colville, Joan Downing, Elmina Morrison, Pollyanna Friedman and Norma Wolfe.

Clark Martin and Robert Melvin were co-managers of the stage with their crew including John Goodchild, Roy Norris and Don Wells.

The properties were in charge of Betty Clifton and Betty Sapp, co-managers, Jack Imler, Mary Ruth Owens and Stella Skinner. Margaret Adkins and Letty Strawser were prompters; Elmer Barr, Jane Colville, Carl Eby, Pollyanna Friedman, Eileen Kirby, Mary Ruth Owens, Betty Sapp, Loraine Stambaugh, Nolan Simms, Grace Wagner and Norma Jean Wolfe, ushers.

The many articles of the attractive setting were loaned by friends of the class members.

companions fled to Manchester where they abandoned the car and then proceeded to Maysville, Ky. They were arrested in Wilmington later by officers investigating the death of Baldwin.

About $100 of McKee's money was found in the trio's passession, Patrolman Brooks asserted. He said that a first degree murder trial now in progress in West Union might delay their removal to the Adams county seat to face robbery charges. Since authorities are convinced that the shooting of Baldwin was accidental, no charges were expected to be filed in that connection.

The trooper said the arrested youths confessed that as long as two weeks ago they planned to rob McKee. He said that Harrison pretended to be trying to repair their car while Abbott and Hampton hid nearby, Baldwin remaining out of sight in the rear seat.

When McKee stopped to render assistance he was held up and robbed, then bound and left in his grocery truck. The young bandits' carefully laid plans went away when in their haste to escape they accidentally shot one of their own number, said Brooks.

The trooper added that burglary charges might be filed against the trio and another youth for the robbery of a store in Melvin, O., of merchandise and a small sum of cash.

YOUTH SENT TO JAIL; CHIEF HITS LOITERING

Paul Will, 20, East High Street, was remanded to the County Jail Friday when he defaulted payment of a fine of $25 and costs levied by Mayor William Cady on charges of drunk and disorderly conduct.

Police Chief William McCrady said Friday that police will be given orders to disperse youths who congregate nightly about the corners of Court and Main Streets. Arrests will be made of those who refuse to leave or who continue to loiter, he said. Police have received further orders to arrest anyone annoying women passersby.

DEWEY CARRIES CAMPAIGN INTO KELLY'S CAMP

CHICAGO, March 29—Moving into Wisconsin, where he faces a vote test Tuesday, District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey of New York today continued a gloves-off denunciation of the New Deal unequalled for vigor in recent political history.

In the second of three set speeches for his Midwest tour, Dewey last night charged widespread corruption in the WPA and laid special emphasis on corruption which he claimed permeates Illinois politics. Tremendous applause shook the Chicago stadium when Dewey declared:

"At present your New Deal Kelly-Nash machine is running a close race with our own (New York) mangy tiger in Tammany Hall to see which is the lowest form of animal life."

His reference was to the political organization dominated by Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago and National Democatic Committeeman Patrick A. Nash, targets of both Republicans and "rebel" Democratic forces in the current state primary election campaign.

board. He never appeared to do so.

Last Seen March 4

He visited at Ranger Reichley home over the end of the week on March 3 and 4. On the latter date, he returned to South Bloomingville where he called for his mail at the postoffice. He "got an armload of mail" according to the son. Later he purchased a loaf of bread at the store there and then started home. That was the last time he was seen.

A search of the home failed to disclose any of the mail or any evidence that the bread had been taken there. Ranger Reichley and neighbors combed the neighborhood and searched every secluded spot. They examined streams and old wells and they visited all of the gorges in that vicinity, but to no avail.

Broadcast Is Made

A broadcast was made over station WBNS Monday and newspapers of the state have been carrying news of the disappearance, but no response has been received.

The son did not know whether he carried any considerable amount of money. He was wearing his good clothes, but no other clothing is missing from the home, he said.

That Mr. Reichler might have gone to visit relatives outside the state is a possibility, but the son said he never took trips of that kind without disclosing his intentions. The search is being continued.

MONEY OF PEN, CONVICTS TAKEN AT STATE FARM

Herbert informed the state parole commission that it may revoke a parole if previously concealed information about a convict is unearthed after his release.

Plummer, it was stated, had access to institutional financial records. He was reported to have entered the restaurant business in Lima upon his release last summer.

Money often is deposited with the prison farm office by relatives of inmates to be used for purchasing items which they are allowed. It was these funds, according to Amrine, which was tampered with by convict-clerks, and in a few instances the state was illegally charged for items.

Further parole revocations were hinted.

LONDON GREETS NEWS THAT NAZI FLEET IS MOVING

LONDON, March 29 — London naval circles today buzzed with excitement after hearing reports that Nazi warships were en route to the Norwegian coast to give battle to British craft pressing the blockade against German ore ships.

While these reports were unofficial and based on nothing more than a broadcast by the Rome radio station, quoting alleged Berlin sources, they were greeted with enthusiasm.

It was reported that a German battle squadron sailed from the Nazi naval base at Wilhelmshaven yesterday and was proceeding along the Danish North Sea coast to the "protected route" through Norwegian territorial waters, used by Nazi ore ships while the Gulf of Bothnia and Baltic are frozen.

The way to a man's heart...

(Yes, through his stomach, as the old saw says)

A man truly belongs to the animal kingdom when he sits down to a well-set table!

There's that aroma rising from an oozing roast. And the smoke-steam from hot biscuits and melting butter. And the bright colors of fresh vegetables and the tart salad. And—sure—a challenging mountain of fluffy, white mashed potatoes with brown, rich gravy to crawl over it!

Back of this invitation to hearty eating is the story of two sharp eyes. They belong to the housewife who planned and prepared the meal. She practiced considerable wizardry in the kitchen, of course. But long before the food even reached her house she had assured the success of her meal.

She read the food advertisements in this newspaper. She selected each item of her meal with studied care. And she set a table fit for a king . . . on an every-day allowance! By reading the advertisements she served well . . . and saved money!

STATE COLLEGE TOWN SHOCKED BY GIRL'S DEATH

Freshman Found Murdered Believed Grabbed Near Her Dormitory

WITNESSES DISCOVERED

Students In Pennsylvania Stunned; Fraternity Leaders Called

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., March 29—Rachel H. Taylor, the 16-year-old Penn State College freshman, may have been within a few feet of safety in her dormitory when her cruel murderer overtook her early Thursday, police disclosed today.

Two men idling in a garage a bare half block from the Frances Atherton dormitory reported they saw a girl resembling Rachel pass early Thursday at about the time the girl debarked from a bus at the college.

The girl was stockily built as was Rachel. She was lugging two coats and a suit-case as also was Rachel. She stopped momentarily in front of the garage and switched the coats and bag from arm to arm, they said.

One of the men, Norman Crandall, a former State College restaurant employe, said he saw an automobile move down the street just after the girl had passed. He said he didn't notice whether it stopped or not.

Both men were to be shown photographs of the girl today to see if they can identify her.

Attacker Known

Rachel was returning home from an Easter vacation at her home in Wildwood, N. J. But before she reached her dormitory, she was intercepted by a killer in an automobile, a maniac who clubbed and stabbed her to death. Because of her reserved attitude toward men, it was believed she was acquainted with the person who proffered her a ride.

The 5,000 Penn State College students were thrown into high excitement by a warning from the college burgess, Wilbur F. Leitzell, that the killer may be among them.

Burgess Leitzell summoned the presidents of the 50 college fraternities into conference and appealed for their cooperation in running down the maniacal killer. He asked them to relay any information or clues they have. The fraternity presidents were asked to check on the whereabouts of all their members late Wednesday night when Rachel was killed and report any found missing.

It had been believed that after riding most of the day on the bus Rachel accepted a ride from the bus station to the dormitory when she reached State College at 1:30 a. m. Thursday. Her horribly battered body was found in front of the Lemont Consolidated School, about four miles from the college.

Seen By Co-eds

Two co-eds reported to police they had seen Rachel walking the three blocks towards the dormitory a short distance from the bus station. The story of the two men in the garage put her almost within the shadows of the building.

In one brief interval, after passing the garage and before reaching the dormitory, she was apparently overtaken by her assailant.

An analysis of the contents of her stomach revealed she had eaten chocolate-covered doughnuts before she was murdered. Police were trying to track down the restaurant or inn where she could have gotten such a snack at that late hour.

It was learned that Miss Taylor was the only woman passenger on the bus from Lewistown, Pa., to State College. Other student passengers said she rode alone from Harrisburg to the college by way of Lewistown.

From Bryn Mawr, Pa., to Harrisburg, she sat beside Samuel Virgilio, a State College horticultural student. Virgilio said the girl appeared restless and unable to sleep most of the journey. She talked but little, he asserted.

The girl's father, Percy Taylor, a well-to-do fish dealer, and her brother, viewed the body at the morgue last night. The father broke down on gazing at the girl's mutilated features.

Plaster casts were made of tire marks and a man's foot-print found near the body. A blood-stained handbag, a blood-stained man's handkerchief, the girl's shoes, text-books and a pocket-book, found strewn along the highway at various points as if thrown from an automobile, were carefully examined for finger-prints.

A coroner's jury rendered a verdict of murder "by crushing of the skull with some blunt or sharp instrument by person or persons unknown."

Rachel had not been criminally assaulted, Dr. Herbert Glenn announced after an examination. The body had numerous skin punctures, cuts and bruises and the clothing was partly torn away.

CROSBY'S JOURNEY

Bing Crosby has decided where to spend his summer vacation from the Music Hall. He will go on a horse-trading and shopping expedition to Argentina, the South American country which exports some of the proudest names of the turf. His family will go along. If Bing finds a few horses for his stables, Bob Burns wishes him better luck than on previous horse trades. A few years ago, Bing looked over a newly-arrived shipment from Argentina, picked Ligaroti as the likeliest champion of the lot. He brushed off Kayak II as not quite having the stuff. Among turfmen, he hasn't lived down that error.

OPEN LETTERS

TO CITY AUTHORITIES

ADMINISTRATION: There are many persons who stand behind you 100 percent in any campaign that you might undertake to break up sale of beer or any other intoxicants to children. This is a law violation that should not receive any mercy from any court officer. It is not difficult to figure a youngster's age even if he might be large for that age. There just isn't any excuse for sale of intoxicants to minors, and any persons violating the law should be punished. A second offense should bring a much larger fine, and possibly a few days in the 'cooler'.

CIRCUITEER.

TO OHIO STATE ALUMNI

GRADS: I am highly pleased that you have finally completed an organization that will function. Congratulations are in order for persons who were responsible for getting the alumni together for this meeting and to persons who accepted offices in the alumni group. A college alumni can do much to advance the interests of its school, just as a high school alumni does. Circleville is without a high school organization, but the need for one is oftentimes apparent. Many cities couldn't get along without the ones that have been operating in their communities for many years. I hope that the Ohio State University Alumni meets regularly and that it works in the interest of the university at all times. Do not make your organization just a dinner club, that meets once a year; get into action with the welfare of Ohio State U. in mind.

CIRCUITEER.

TO MOTORISTS

DRIVERS: I know that none of you would like to donate $25 to the city of Circleville for driving an automobile without proper license plates. I know that few of you could afford to put 25 smackers on the line. So, if you do not have new 1940 license tags prior to Monday, please leave your automobile in its garage. The state has declared definitely that there will be no extension of time for use of 1939 tags and mayors of all municipalities have been instructed to assess $25 fines against all drivers who try to "run the gauntlet" by using 1939 plates on Monday. Motorists are being given every opportunity to buy new plates. The county clerk's office will be open Saturday afternoon to accommodate persons who need certificates of title certified; the deputy registrar's office will be open each evening to handle the late rush. Be sure to get your tags before Sunday.

CIRCUITEER.

TO CAR OPERATORS

FOLK: More and more of you are watching your car operation as carefully as possible to avoid being cited into court for violations. If this apparent cooperation continues Circleville one of these days will own a reputation for being a traffic law-abiding city. New regulations have gone into effect and others are soon to become effective. The new ones already being operated include regulation of speed in business and residential districts and parking of cars against traffic, in other words, on the wrong side of the street. Several persons have been ordered before the mayor for violating the latter ordinance which started operation just last week. In a short time the ordinance that orders parallel parking on Main Street begins operation. This one, too, will have to be observed, and I feel certain that Circleville motorists will do everything in their power to abide by the rulings set up by council, since all are drawn in an effort to make highway traffic safer for all concerned.

CIRCUITEER.

TO ALL

FRIENDS: A program will be offered in the auditorium of St. Philip's Episcopal Church parish house Sunday afternoon which should attract a record crowd. It is a dramatic program sponsored by the Youth Division of the Ohio Council of Religious Education as a part of a statewide undertaking. Dramatic teams from Somerset, Portsmouth and Columbus will come to Circleville to participate. Trained critics will be present and discussions will be conducted after each drama has been presented. The afternoon should provide some excellent entertainment. There will be no admission charged to the event. Winner of the contest will go to Columbus later to take part in the state finals. Two former Circleville High School dramatic instructors will judge the dramatic presentations Sunday and the event will provide many of their former pupils a chance to renew acquaintances.

CIRCUITEER.

TO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

BUSINESSMEN: Announcement that your welcoming committee is functioning is being received in Circleville with much appreciation. It is an excellent undertaking to have your committee call on newcomers to Circleville with a basket filled with contributions from Circleville merchants who wish the newcomers to become acquainted with their products. Not only does such a committee help to acquaint the new residents with goods available in Circleville, but it also shows them that their presence has been noted by persons other than their immediate neighbors. This committee may overcome one of Circleville's very apparent shortcomings. Many persons, who are more or less new residents, have been heard to remark that Circleville is a difficult city in which to become acquainted; that residents do not receive newcomers in a very cordial manner. I hope that the committee continues to function and that the city's utilities will cooperate by letting the Chamber of Commerce know when a new family arrives. Cooperation means much to the success of this program.

WORLD AT A GLANCE .....

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

THE RIVERS AND HARBORS CONGRESS, held in Washington recently, wanted considerably more money, for the development of America's inland waterways, than President Roosevelt regards as a judicious federal expenditure at present. It's the usual situation. Theoretically everybody's strongly proeconomy. But no special group is in favor of it in connection with the particular objective that that group is interested in.

From remarks I overheard at the last R. and H. congress I wouldn't draw the conclusion that those in attendance were violently clamorous for coastal harbor improvements, but there was no doubt that all hands wanted plenty of cash to make our rivers more and more conveniently navigable.

There also was vehement objection to making inland water transportation subject to regulation by the Interstate Commerce Commission or any other government bureau.

The foremost proponent of I. C. C. regulation is Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, who has just completed an investigation of the railroads' financial straits during the last decade or two. There's no doubt that the rail lines are hard up. The Wheeler inquiry explained their distress on the ground that auto trucks and river steamboatmen have had their highways and waterways improved for them at public expense, enabling them to underbid the rail companies, which have to pay for their own permanent equipment.

RIVAL VIEWS

The Wheeler theory is that the I. C. C. should be empowered to require the truckmen and rivermen to hike their rates, to permit the railroads the better to compete with them.

This may be all right from the standpoint of Senator Wheeler, who hails from an area which is very dependent on railroads, but isn't much tapped by waterways. It isn't much satisfactory reasoning to Senator Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota, who's up at the head of mid-continental water. Senator Shipstead recalls times when the railroads, uncompeted with, were middling oppressive to his section of the country. It's largely their own fault, he says, that they're pinched today; they wouldn't have been if they hadn't been so greedy when they had a monopoly.

The Minnesota senator calls attention to the huge saving his state makes by getting its coal by river, down the Ohio river and up the Mississippi; to its economy in its own products' shipment down the Father of Waters, up the Ohio and the Big Muddy, and thereabouts. He's for navigation and lots of it, as cheaply as possible.

"What's more," observes Senator Shipstead, "water's an asset. We don't want to trickle it off as soon as possible, by nature's own means.

ARGUMENT FOR WATER

"We want to conserve it, upriver, by means of dams, turning it loose only as it's needed, to float river boats. It prevents erosion. It preserves our soil. It's anything but a liability."

This isn't much of a defense of the auto-truck, of which the railroads also complain.

Trucks, after all, can't do a large bulk business.

They can carry quite a few second-class passengers. I say second-class advisedly. I've travelled both by bus and by train, and I'll guarantee that a train is the more comfortable than the two. I don't think that aviation makes much of a dent.

Anyway, busses can't carry coal and grain in appreciable quantities. River boats can.

Essentially the row is between the railroads' past misdeeds and current conditions.

Senator Shipstead is right, though, in saying that inland water is an asset.

It's involved in the rivers and harbors controversy—rivers particularly; not so much harbors.

Tularemia Weapon in Bacterial War?

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IS BACTERIAL warfare the secret weapon which Hitler plans against his enemies?

We have heard of the idea of spreading disease germs among the enemy population, but the difficulty for a bacteriologist has been to conceive of a plan which would be likely to work.

I have information from a source which must remain anonymous, but which is sufficiently responsible that he has committed himself to writing, that what the Germans have in mind is the transmission of tularemia (better known as rabbit fever).

They are said to have infected colonies of flies, which are being kept in a refrigerator at a temperature of about 40 to 50 degrees above zero. It has been found that when these flies are returned to an ordinary warm temperature, they are restored to activity and the tularemia germs begin to develop inside their bodies.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Dropped from Planes

The flies can be taken from the refrigerator in wholesale quantities and dropped from airplanes to enemy countries. They infect animals, and the animals, in turn, infect humans just as they have done in this country. This bacteriological war, of course, would be specifically planned for the civilian population and not for the soldiers at the front.

According to bacteriologists and hygienists to whom I have talked, the plan is perfectly feasible. In the first place, tularemia, though it usually occurs in a mild form, may become malignant. We had a number of cases of malignant tularemia resulting in death last fall in the United States. We also have had reports that tularemia affects not only such animals as rabbits (the usual reservoir), but also domestic animals, fowls and even fish.

The German technicians may have developed a special malignant form of tularemia, and one that will have an affinity for domestic rather than wild animals. This form naturally would reach the human population sooner.

Difficulties Encountered

When one considers any other form of bacterial warfare, he is met with technical difficulties. It would no longer be possible to infect the water supply with the old scourges of typhoid fever or cholera because public health methods are adequate in all civilized countries to protect the population from this source of infection. Bubonic plague is too uncertain because the animals infected might not reach the civilian population. Nobody knows the germ of influenza, so that can't be spread around. The only thing that is left is some form of insect-carried infection.

Tularemia can be prevented by wearing rubber gloves when dressing animals, but such precautions are, as we know from our own experience, too often neglected.

The only catch in this scheme for bacterial warfare is that the tularemia might easily get across the border into Germany, and, with the immunity of the German people weakened by an insufficient diet, as described by Dr. Gumpert in Heil Hunger: Health Under Hitler (published by the Alliance Book Corporation), the effects might be more decimating on the German population than on a foreign one.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet", "Indigestion and Constipation", "Reducing and Gaining", "Infant Feeding", "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes", "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin".

More than 60 were in attendance at the banquet and interesting program when the annual Rotary-Ann banquet was held at the New American Hotel coffee shop. Prof. F. R. Harris, Greenfield, talked, using "Women" for his subject.

A large audience witnessed the second performance of the junior class play "Take My Advice" in which Burn Jones, portraying the part of the village loafer, and Tillie Davis, playing the role of a would-be society leader, succeeded in keeping the crowd in a continuous uproar.

THE KILLER SPEAKS

by RICHARD HOUGHTON

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

I, Bill Strickland, am suspected in the murder of Alfred Markham, rich young jeweler, at a party at the Rio Vista club. An hour later, in the dark garden where my friend was stabbed, I am slugged, trussed up and kidnaped. Belzer, reporter for The Morning Eagle, and Louise Markham, sister of Alfred, rescue me. My unknown kidnaper sends me a warning not to identify him to the police. The next night, with a police guard in front of my rooms, I return home, feeling safe, and open the door to come face to face with a man.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

"BELZER!" I gasped.

He blinked his eyes in the sudden light and grinned at me. "Sorry I scared you. Guess I must have fallen asleep."

"But how did you get in here?"

He looked surprised. "I asked the landlady if I could wait. She looked kinda peeved to be waked at midnight, but my press card made her think I was important. I waited a half hour, then I turned off the light to get a snooze."

"But the guard out in front—the policeman?"

"Oh, yeah! I wasn't sure of the address. He said this was it. He's a friend of mine."

I was beginning to breathe normally again. "What did you want to see me about?" I offered him a cigaret and lighted one myself, then dropped to a seat on the edge of the sofa.

"About a little more co-operation. Some of the smart guys on the other papers will be around to see you in the morning. I'm here first."

"So I see. It's evident. Why?"

"Just to be here first, that's all. Belzer of the Eagle gets his man—first."

"You mean you intend to stay here the rest of the night?"

"And why not? I've slept on worse places than that sofa. Right after sun-up you and I can start going places."

I couldn't help grinning back at him. The cheek of him! However, that was the way he got his news. He was a good reporter. No one could deny it.

The sofa made up into a fairly comfortable bed. I loaned him a pair of spare blankets. "Don't open the window too wide," I warned him. "Fog is likely to blow in from the river."

"Don't I know it! I'll sleep with the windows shut. Wouldn't want to dampen any of these faces you have hanging around the walls. Did you paint 'em all? Who's that dame over the radio?" He twisted his cigaret butt into the ash tray and squinted at her again. "I've seen her some place."

"You saw her at the Rio Vista club," I told him. "That's Miss Muriel Benson."

"Oh, yeah! The dame that fainted." He gave me a queer look. "Well, g'night, Butch. See you in the morning."

The last I saw of him as I closed the bedroom door, he was staring at the picture and scratching his head. Now that he had taken his hat off, at last, I noticed that he was slightly bald.

I expected to lie awake, my thoughts in a turmoil, but I reckoned without the physical exhaustion of the past 24 hours. My sleep was dreamless. I wakened to find Belzer in the doorway, banging on a tin plate with a spoon. The air was pungent with the aroma of coffee.

I jumped out of bed. "Stop that! My landlady—"

"Your landlady is downtown, doing her shopping. It's nine o'clock and we've got to be on our way. My policeman friend at your front door goes off duty at 10, and his successor may not be as successful in persuading my rivals that you're not to be disturbed."

He led me, still in my pajamas, to the front window where we peeked through the curtains. Several young men stood on the sidewalk below, arguing with the plain clothes officer. Two cameramen were seated on the curb as though resigned to waiting all day.

"What will we do—go out the back way?" I asked him.

"Leave that to me. Get dressed. I'll get you out of here."

I had to admit he was a good cook. By 9:30, bathed, shaved and in clean clothes, with a breakfast of bacon and eggs to fortify me against what the day might bring, I was ready to follow the lead of my unusual guest.

"You realize," I reminded him, "that I am doing this as a special favor to you. After all, I might just walk out there and talk to those reporters."

He wasn't the least perturbed. "Not you, Butch. You're too honest. You can't forget that I saved your life."

"And so it's to be another exclusive story, is it?"

"Right. Today you and I find the warehouse where you were held prisoner. We'll also go looking for the man who kidnaped you. I have a line on him, believe it or not."

"That's what the police thought last night." I was skeptical, but at the same time curious. "When do we start?"

"Now." He dumped a pot of water over the dirty dishes in the sink, so they would soak. Stepping to the telephone he asked for a number with which he seemed to be familiar, but which was strange to me.

"All set," he said into the mouthpiece.

Enjoying my mystification, he signaled me to the window again, "Watch!" he whispered.

In less than five minutes, down the street came an old covered wagon, drawn by two burros and driven by an old man with a long white beard.

One of the cameramen stood up and reached for his camera. The other hesitated.

A pretty girl stuck her head out of the curtains of the covered wagon behind the old man.

The first cameraman stepped out into the street to get a picture, but the second one had literally leaped past him to get it first.

The old man saw them coming. He turned the burros around. I'd never seen burros move so quickly before. He cracked a whip, and they broke into a fast shuffle. They didn't want to run, but they were doing their second best.

The reporters joined the chase. They were catching up with the queer vehicle at the corner, but the old man kept plying the whip, and in another moment the burros had all but rounded the bend, out of sight.

"Okay," said Belzer. He was headed for the stairs. I was close behind. In two minutes we were out on the street, and in another minute were safely around the opposite corner of the block.

The Morning Eagle's ace couldn't help stopping to catch his breath and expend it in a laugh. "I knew that old guy would come in handy, the moment I saw him yesterday. No cameraman could resist such a perfect shot."

"You mean, you arranged for him to supply this diversion?"

"Sure. He's been waiting at the parking lot a block down the street since eight o'clock. I picked that place because it has a telephone."

"But if it's such a perfect picture, didn't you cheat your paper out of—"

He chuckled. "We got our picture yesterday. And I paid him plenty to keep quiet about the fact that he is the man who put me wise to the best clue yet in the Markham murder ase. Won't those guys feel sick when they read The Morning Eagle tomorrow!"

STARS SAY—

For Friday, March 29

THE PLANETARY configurations for the day are read as extremely benefic, with strong prospects of fulfilled ambitions and aspirations in every direction. It is a time for reaching for high goals, and toward social, sentimental and humanitarian objectives. In business there is promise of the co-operation of those in power and financial security, whose friendship will be assured and greatly worthwhile. Romance also figures for the eligible. But in all there is an aura of intrigue, collusion or subtlety, operating for good or ill, according to the way it is manipulated.

Those whose birthday it is are at the threshold of a door in which benefic astral forces will be found the open sesame for attaining high goals and fondly-cherished hopes and wishes. In business the friendship and co-operation of the mighty should be cultivated. In social, emotional and philanthropic avenues the signs are propitious, especially for courtship and marriage. But all affairs are under tow forms of intrigue, subtlety and conspiracy—one adverse, the other to be employed to enhance and facilitate cautious plans. Be alert to deception and peculiar entanglements.

A child born on this day may have much ability for success, with expansive and large ambitions, which it may put over on a pretentious scale through the support of those in power. Popularity social prestige and romance are assured.

Today's Garden-Graph

The "Hole" Story of Transplanting a Tree

The life of a tree depends largely upon the care exercised in transplanting it. From the time a tree is dug until it is finally planted the roots should not be exposed to sun, wind or drying air, but they should be kept moist and protected by a covering.

It is a good precaution to have the hole dug in advance of the delivery of the tree, as shown in today's Garden-Graph. A piece of canvas should be spread on the lawn and the dirt taken from the hole may be thrown upon it, thus protecting the grass. Dig the hole the desired width and depth, then loosen the hard subsoil at the bottom of it.

Fertilizer, consisting of manure or compost, can be mixed with the soil in the bottom of the hole, or, after the tree has been planted, it can be placed about it as a mulch. It can, of course, be used in both places providing care is taken to keep the manure from coming in direct contact with the tree's bare roots.

COLUMBUS IN RUNNING FOR 1942 ABC TOURNEY

DETROIT, March 29 — Annual meeting today of the American Bowling Congress, with upwards of 1,000 delegates on hand, took the spotlight in the 40th annual championships.

It was a foregone conclusion that St. Paul, Minn., would be voted as the 1941 tournament city but a hot fight for the 1942 site loomed with Columbus, O., and Indianapolis, out in front.

Four changes in the individual events were chalked up by St. Louis bowlers with Lowell Jackson, one of the top keglers of the country, feeling off a sensational 299 game. A stubborn No. 7 pin remained on the final ball cutting the St. Louis ace out of the seventh 300 game to be rolled in the national tourney.

Betting Negligible As Louis And Paychek Meet

By Lawton Carver

NEW YORK, March 29—Breaking all records, including his own, for heavyweight championship defenses, Joe Louis will risk his crown for the 10th time tonight, with the odds ranging upward all the way to 10 to 1 that he will defeat Johnny Paychek, of Des Moines, and thus survive further to stretch his string. Betting was negligible on what appeared to be one of the least violent engagements ever arranged for the tawny-pelted title-holder.

Most of the wagering, in fact, had to do with how many rounds Paychek will remain in the ring, the price being around 5 to 1 that he will have changed his venue before the 15 rounds have run their course.

Two factors entered into the assumption of a sudden termination of the festivities, one being, of course, that Paychek apparently can't fight much, or, anyhow, not well enough for the company he travels in tonight. The other thing is that Louis is always a rough and tough party bouncing back from the humiliation of a poor showing such as he made last month against Arturo Godoy.

Some recalled that Louis belted Max Schmeling out in two minutes and four seconds of the first round when they met for the second time, and there was conjecture over whether the champion might play the course even below that par this evening. This seemed to depend largely on how steamed up he might be. Few paid any attention to the supposition that he has slipped, although this fight will prove something in that respect.

A knockout for Louis will give him a record of 38 such wins in 46 professional starts, while Paychek will be aiming at his 24th knockout in his last 33 engagements, during which he has progressed from nowhere to his present eminence as challenger for the championship.

PERRONI CLAIMS WALKER SHOULDN'T BE TITLIST

COLUMBUS, March 29—Patsy Perroni, Canton Italian who Monday will attempt to lift the Ohio Heavyweight boxing crown from the dusky brow of Jack "Buddy" Walker, today tried to talk the undefeated Columbus Negro out of his title.

"How can Walker claim the Ohio crown?" Perroni queried. "I beat Risko, king of the Ohio heavies, before Walker dreamed of entering a ring. I've never been whipped in Ohio.

"Walker is not Ohio champ; I am. I'll prove it Monday."

McCARTHY SENDS ROOKIES TO KANSAS CITY FARM

SEBRING, Fla., March 29—Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees today released Pitchers Ernie Bonham and Charles Stanceu to Kansas City and Pitcher George Washburn, Infielder Lou Blair and Outfielder Mike Chartak to Kansas City, lightening the roster for the forthcoming jaunt into Texas. The Yanks to their embarrassment were trounced 6 to 4 by their farm hands, the Newark Bears yesterday.

By Pat Robinson

NEW YORK, March 29—A consensus of old ball players and veteran scouts who have been knocking about the various training camps is greatly at odds with some of the roseate reports emanating from those same camps.

For instance, these old timers are by no means willing to accept the general opinion that the Cardinals have the National League pennant already sewed up. On the contrary, they foresee a wide open race, with six teams in the running, and the Reds slightly favored to repeat.

They are willing to string along with the Yanks again but no such overwhelming margin as last season and, given the breaks, even concede the Red Sox a fighting chance to win.

A thumb-nail sketch of their ideas on each team runs like this:

YANKS: Tough as ever, with Keller, Dahlgren and Gordon improving and Russo and Breuer ready to take up any slack among the veteran pitchers.

RED SOX: Ted Williams figures to be the sensation of the year and if Bagby and Wilson stand up in the box, may be tough to comb.

INDIANS: Better infield defense at short and second but Feller can't pitch every day.

TIGERS: Bartell at short improves the left side of the infield and they'll have better catching and more hitting, gained by sacrificing defense at first and left field by shifting Greenberg and York.

WHITE SOX: A nice hitting club, carrying more power, but needing pitching.

SENATORS: Fastest club in the game and if Pofahl holds up at short will have more hitting strength but they need pitching.

ATHLETICS: Slight but steady improvement all around and will be tougher for the leaders to take.

BROWNS: Hopeless.

REDS: Pitching fine and Lombardi will be back at his best and left field probably will be improved.

CARDINALS: Plenty of power but still an unsolved problem around the keystone and, highly important, will a dissatisfied Joe Medwick bear down all the way?

DODGERS: Best infield in the National League; improved outfield; but still need more pitching and another high grade catcher.

CUBS: Better spirit and slightly better all around.

GIANTS: Full of question marks. If everybody clicks, as good a chance as any. If not, could finish down with the Phillies.

PIRATES: Under Frankie Frisch, some of the older Bucs will show some pep for the first time in their lives. Frank's already yelling for pitching. Otherwise, a good club.

BEES: As Mike Gonzales once read: "Plenty field, no hit." They'll lose many a one-run game.

PHILLIES: More than hopeless. Impossible.

PURINA CHOWS IN SEMI-FINALS OF COURT MEET

Team Play Proves Deciding Issue; New Marshfield To Be Opposed

Rated as underdogs, but playing a type of basketball that kept their taller Chillicothe foes behind from almost the first second of play, the Ralston-Purina Chows of Circleville advanced to the semi-finals Thursday evening in the Hocking County Independent Basketball tournament being conducted at Union Furnace. The Purina team turned back the strong Chillicothe Stone's Grill, 37-29, to advance. The localites, winners of the City League crown, take on New Marshfield at 8 o'clock Friday evening, the finals to be played at 10 the same evening.

Stone's Grill scored first, but couldn't stand the pace of the Purina boys and trailed 6-8 at the quarter. The Purina lads went ahead 19-13 at halftime, and held only a single point edge as the last quarter started 25-24. The Chillicotheans were never in the lead but kept the score close for the first few minutes of the last session. Holding a two point edge in the middle of the last period the Chows took time out for a discussion, then went to town for the remainder of the game.

Creighton Anderson, Purina forward, turned in one of his best performances of the year, getting nine field goals, most of them on pretty passes from his teammates. Whacker Davis, Stone's Grill manager, assigned Nick Holmes, Williams College star, to play Anderson, but Holmes couldn't do much about the Purina youth's shooting. Brilliant teamplay by all members of the Purina outfit brought the victory rather than the work of any one youth.

Taggert and Henson were high for Stone's Grill with 12 and 10 points respectively.

Box score:

BEN HOGAN CLAIMS TOP PRIZE TO CAROLINA OPEN

GREENSBORO, N. C., March 29—Ben Hogan, of White Plains, N. J., today took his place among the all-time greats of golf as he pocketed the $1,200 first prize money in the $5,000 Greensboro Open tournament.

Hogan captured the tourney yesterday by shooting a 5-below par 66 on the morning round, and a 67 on the afternoon round, to give him a 72-hole score of 270—14 strokes below par. This was one stroke better than the record set in 1938 by Sam Snead of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa.

Hogan's best shot was a drive off the No. 7 tee which struck the flag 225 yards away for a sure birdie. Craig Wood, Hamaroneck, N. Y., collected the $750 second money with a score of 279.

Ralph Guldahl, Johnny Revolta, Byron Nelson and Paul Runyan got $412 apiece in a four-way tie for third place.

BONURA SIGNS; GIANTS SHUT OUT CINCINNATI

WINTER HAVEN, Fla., March 29—Zeke Bonura had made his peace with the New York Giants today. After weeks of bickering, Bonura signed a contract last night, just in time to start on the road with the team. It was believed he got something beyond the $10,000 against which he was holding out. Hy Vandenberg, a Jersey City recruit, looked impressive yesterday as he helped Cliff Melton shut out the Cincinnati Reds 8 to 0.

ZALE'S TITLE CHANCES HINGE ON BROWN BOUT

CHICAGO, March 29 — Tony Zale, of Gary, Ind., rated No. 2 among the middleweight challengers, and Ben Brown, of Atlanta, Ga., today were set for a ten-round battle on the outcome of which Zale's title hopes may rest.

ROTARIANS, YOUTHS HEAR JUVENILE DELINQUENCY QUESTION DISCUSSED

CAPTAIN HAYS OF INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL TALKS

Children Are Individuals And Must Be Treated As Such, Civic Club Hears

F. E. BARNHILL NOMINATED

Committee Proposes Slate Of Officers To Serve In Next Year

Thirty-three boys ranging from eight to 15 years old were guests of the Rotary Club at its Thursday meeting in the American Hotel to hear Captain H. L. Hays, superintendent of the Boys Industrial School at Lancaster, address the gathering on "Juvenile Delinquency."

Prior to Captain Hays address, President William Radcliff announced the nominees selected by the nominating committee to serve as officers of the club during the year 1940-41. The nominees selected by the committee are Frank E. Barnhill, president; Rev. Robert T. Kelsey and Harry Heffner, vice president; Charles T. Gilmore and Charles Goeller, secretary; D. D. Dowden and John A. Ryan, treasurer, Robert L. Brehmer, Harry Hill, Charles Little and Dr. Edward L. Montgomery, directors.

Opening his address, Captain Hays told the Rotarians and their guests that the primary reason children get into difficulties is that they are so seldom recognized an individuals. He said that children should be remembered as such and the thought should be borne in mind that each child, having individual problems, makes it difficult for him to abide always to the group rules.

Boys, Girls Need Help

"Boys and girls just don't grow up," he remarked. "They need help and guidance in the process. If they are children who live in their own homes, the responsibility lies with the parents, the schools and the churches. If the children are not living in their own homes it is the job of the state or local subdivision's institutions to provide that guidance."

After outlining the types of homes and kinds of aid that are provided for children, Captain Hays discussed the work of the Boys' Industrial School at Lancaster. At present there are 800 boys at the institution and another 800 are on parole, he informed the group.

"The reason that boys usually come to Lancaster is that adults don't understand the problems of young people. We, at Lancaster, try to rehabilitate the boys that come to us, not punish them. The idea that our purpose is to punish is entirely false," Captain Hays continued.

Hunt Difficulties

"Our job, like that of the juvenile judge, is to discover what the boys' difficulties are. If we can't find those difficulties and correct them so that the boy will become a good citizen then we have failed."

That 57 percent of the boys come to Lancaster because of broken homes was a fact to which Captain Hays pointed. Others come there because of one misstep that they might have made. In cases like that they should be guided and advised rather than be sent to the school, he told the group.

"Juvenile judges are beginning to realize that fact and instead of sending them to us immediately are trying to work more closely with the boys in their own areas, forgiving them a mistake and trying to show them how it was made," Captain Hays remarked.

"Boys get into difficulties because they fall in with bad companions. Playing hookey from school is another principle cause. When they play hookey they have to spend their time with others who have done the same thing.

"Musunderstanding of parents by the children is another difficulty that tends toward juvenile delinquency. Children should be made to understand why parents want them home early in the evenings and why certain demands are put on them," he continued.

Captain Hays then spoke of the question of rehabilitation of the boys once they have returned home from the school. He realized that there is a certain stigma attached to boys who have been there, but he asked the Rotarians to recognize the fact that the boys are not criminals and that every effort should be made to remove a false impression.

Communities Vital

"Give them a helping hand and extend to them an opportunity to make good. Remember that rehabilitation must take place in the communities from which the boys have come as well as at Lancaster," he concluded.

Probate Judge Lemuel Weldon, Juvenile Officer Frank C. Goff and Harry Grove, clerk of the Probate Court, were guests at the luncheon also.

POLISH PASTOR EXECUTED FOR PART IN MURDER

TRENTON, N. J., March 29—A grave beside that of his daughter, Wanda, 18, for whose murder he was executed last night in the electric chair, today awaited the body of the Rev. Walter Dworecki, 49, a Polish evangelist.

Buoyed up by hours of praying, Dworecki went calmly to his death at 8:04 last night mumbling passages from the scriptures. He was the first clergyman executed in New Jersey since 1907 when the electric chair came into use.

Dworecki was convicted of arranging for the murder of Wanda to collect between $5,000 and $6,000 insurance on her life. Peter Schewchuck, 21, a circus roustabout who, police charge did the actual strangling for the promise of a $100 fee on which he received only 50 cents, is awaiting trial.

KENNEDY NAME FIGHT RESULTS IN INJUNCTION

COLUMBUS, March 29—The battle of the two Cuyahoga County Kennedys, each seeking the Democratic nomination for secretary of state, was in the Franklin County Common Pleas Court for settlement today.

Judge Dana F. Reynolds granted a temporary injunction, pending hearing of the case, which enjoined Secretary of State Earl Griffith from placing the name of Earl Kennedy, North Olmstead, on the ballot at the May 14 primary. The suit followed Griffith's refusal to ban Earl Kennedy's name from the ballot.

The other candidate, John J. Kennedy, Cleveland attorney, had asked that Earl Kennedy's name be barred because his nominating petitions reportedly bore signatures of unregistered voters.

Hitler has a ready-made excuse if he should wish to stage a blitzkreig against Holland. He can always say he was just trying to liberate the ex-kaiser.

Health Office Receives Gift of Florida Oranges

Dr. A. D. Blackburn, Secretary Harriet Henness, and Nurse Margaret Hunsicker, the staff of the county health department, should be gushing with vitamins and glowing with that look of health for the next few weeks. They have embarked on a program of digesting loads of ultra violet rays that have been packed into the sun kissed oranges of Florida.

The Railway Express Company delivered a bushel basket of oranges to the office Thursday, the gift of W. E. Lamb, member of the county board of health, who is vacationing in the sunny South.

There was a goodly crowd in the health department's office Thursday and between the drip of orange juice from chin to floor and the flying of orange peels to the wastebasket it was learned that the fruit came directly from the famous Indian Rock Orange Groves near Clearwater.

Almost inaudible amidst the gurgling of the juice was the information that Mr. Lamb sends a similar basket almost every year when he winters in Florida. Last year's basket contained grapefruits and tangerines as well as oranges, but this year only the latter fruit arrived.

The fruit, large and sweet, was most welcome, it was explained, since the juice of citrus fruits is most beneficial in fighting the ravages of the common cold in the springtime. Health came to the health department hidden under a bushel.

TWO SEPARATE PROBES OF MINE TRAGEDY START

NEFFS, O., March 29 — Two separate investigations, seeking the cause of the blast that ripped through the Willow Grove mine March 16 and claimed the lives of 72 men, got under way today.

A formal, 12-man board was to begin its probe with a trip through the shattered workings, and then question survivors of the explosion. Belmont County Coroner Clyde C. Hardesty said he would conduct a separate inquest.

Two possible causes of the blast were advanced for consideration—that drillers unwittingly struck an abandoned gas well, or that coal dust in the mine became ignited. The significance of a shattered powder keg found near the scene of the blast was to be studied.

Members of the 12-man committee included George A. Strain, Ohio industrial relations director; Nelson Hovey, assistant director; J. J. Forbes, federal mine inspector, R. L. Hanna, president of the Hanna Coal Co., operators of the mine; county, mine and United Mine Workers officials, deputy mine inspectors, and an explosive expert.

EX-CONVICT, 39, KILLED BY GUN OF POLICEMAN

CINCINNATI, March 29—Shot by an officer who surprised him in a filling station, Elmer Hoffman, 39, an ex-convict, was dead today.

Hoffman was shot by Patrolman Marvin Campbell. The officer said he fired three shots and Hoffman fell to the ground.

"Then," Hoffman related, "He begged me not to shoot any more. Then I walked closer to him. When I was within three feet of him, he suddenly fired at me. I then fired the remaining bullets in my revolver."

JR. FAIR BOARD NAMES BRADLEY AS ITS LEADER

At the reorganization meeting Thursday night of the Junior Fair Board, G. D. Bradley, teacher at the Pickaway and Jackson schools, was reelected chairman for the coming year.

Kenneth Holtrey, teacher at the Walnut Township school, was elected vice president while the office of secretary-treasurer went to George D. McDowell, county superintendent of schools.

Dr. Glen D. Phillips, Circleville, offered his resignation from the board at the meeting. He asked that the resignation be effective immediately and said that it was necessary because of the press of other affairs.

No successor to take over Dr. Phillip's work with the Boy Scouts has been named.

FERGUSON SENDS LETTERS ASKING SOLONS' MONEY

COLUMBUS, March 29 — Letters asking repayment to the state treasury on mileage fees collected during a five-months recess of the Ohio Legislature were mailed today to 25 members of the 1936 senate by State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson.

The only other living member of that senate who collected fees in the famous "mileage grab," Verner E. Metcalf, Marietta, has already presented Ferguson with a check for $194.40.

The sums which Ferguson asked of the senators ranged from $69 to $302, according to the distance supposed to have been traveled between their homes and Columbus for the non-existent legislative sessions. The amounts totaled $5,464.

When the injunction suit of Arnett Harbage, West Jefferson farmer and self-styled "watchdog of the Ohio Treasury," reached the supreme court, that tribunal ruled that the senators were not entitled to the payments. The decision also blocked the payment of $21,507 in similar grants to members of the 1936 House of Representatives.

Metcalf, now serving in an executive capacity with the bureau of unemployment compensation, and several other senators said they would lose money because of the decision. They contended that they had spent various sums attending committee sessions during the legislative recess.

Their only recourse for legal reimbursement, it was said, would be the presentation of a sundry claim to some future session of the legislature.

April is usually the wettest month of the year, but when there's a political campaign on most of the mud-slinging takes place in October.

OHIO BUSINESS LEADERS MEET IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, March 29—Ohio businessmen and congressmen met today in Washington for the third annual national legislative conference.

Purpose of the conference, sponsored by the Ohio Chamber of Commerce, was to present to legislators a three-point program relating to issues now before Congress. They are:

1. The Logan-Walter bill, which prescribes uniform procedure for federal regulatory bureaus and makes their rules and regulations reviewable by the courts before becoming effective.

2. Amendments to the National Labor Relations act.

3. Appropriations for the fiscal year 1941.

"Our sole object in this conference is to assist in making the world a better place to live in," A. Graves Williams, president of the Ohio chamber said. "We are not asking for special privileges. We are asking for action that will be beneficial to the world as a whole."

Scheduled speakers at a meeting tonight included: F. G. Crawford, Cleveland manufacturer and president of that city's chamber of commerce; Freeman T. Eagleson, Columbus attorney, and Ralph P. Ward, member of the staff of the Ohio chamber.

5,000 TO MEET AS REPUBLICANS DRAW PROGRAM

COLUMBUS, March 29 — Arrangements were completed today for a two-day "rally" of Republicans leaders and party members which is expected to bring together in Columbus next Tuesday and Wednesday 5000 persons from all parts of the state.

Three speakers will be in the lime light as the state GOP organization gathers to review its accomplishments and make plans for this year's state and national campaigns. They are U. S. Sen. Robert A. Taft, "favorite son" candidate for the GOP presidential nomination; Governor Bricker, candidate for re-election, and Kenneth P. Simpson, a member of the party's state committee in New York.

Simpson, representing the national committee, will speak at the afternoon session Wednesday, while Taft and Bricker will appear on the evening program.

The three candidates for the Republican nomination for U. S. Senator will be given an opportunity to speak briefly Wednesday afternoon. They are Congressman Dudley A. White, of Norwalk, Mayor Harold H. Burton, of Cleveland, and C. E. Wharton of Kenton.
